

EASTER, SEASON OF JOY, IS HERE

Glad Hosannas for the Risen Christ Mark Close of the Penitential Period and All Nature Responds to the Glory of the Resurrection

(By ROSEMARY CHRISTEN)

TODAY, Easter Sunday, marks the end of the 40 days of meditation and of penitence; the end of Holy Week, with its symbolic agony of the Garden of Gethsemane and the sacrifice upon the cross. All thoughts cease to dwell so greatly upon the intense sufferings of Christ and now rejoice and glory in the Resurrection. Choristers will pour forth their glad hosannas on this Easter morning and all who are able will undoubtedly assist in the solemn and impressive church services.

Easter comes early this year, unusually so, but nevertheless all nature has been prepared, so to speak, for the arrival. To make the Easter season beautiful and delightful, nature must do its part and so it has. Robins, lots and lots of robins, are here and the tulips, the daffodils and other early spring flowers are far above the mulch. Hepaticas are uncurling furry stems and the lilac bushes and the trees are bursting forth in full bud.

Once again after 40 days of solitude in the social world, there will be an awakening and merriment will be kept very busy enjoying all the delightful affairs scheduled.

The Stroller's club, composed of the younger members of the social set, will give their Easter dance at the Lima club Monday evening. The affair will be informal, but members of the club are earnestly endeavoring to make it most enjoyable and attractive.

The pretty dinner dances will be given the fore-part of the week. Tuesday evening the members of the Elks' club will give their dinner dance at the club while Thursday is the day scheduled for the K. of C. dinner dance.

Friday the Beta Sigma sorority will hold their Easter dance at the Lima club. Judging from the number of tickets having already been sold, the affair will certainly be most successful and it is assured that it will be delightful. Proceeds will be used in the furtherance of work of a philanthropic nature.

Music lovers are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Thursday, when the Woman's Music club will hold one of their matinee recitals at the First Baptist church. The program will be somewhat unusual in that it is to be composed entirely of organ selections. Miss Ray Heffner and Mrs. P. R. Marshall are in charge.

Edgar Stallemith and family are the week-end guests of friends and relatives in Cleveland.

For the pleasure of little Miss Elizabeth Daymon, Findlay, Mrs. Edward Blair entertained a group of children at her home at a pretty Easter party Friday. The afternoon was employed in childish games and in a clever contest, in keeping with the season, Madgalene Ruff, Helen Beatty and Mary Binkley were successful. Later the hostess served a delicious lunch, a yellow and green color scheme being used.

Guests included Beatrice Riedle, Betty Whitney, Alice Pearl Roeder, Madgalene Ruff, Madgalene Ward, Ruth and Lois Keller, Isabelle and Helen Beatty, Rose and Catherine Houston, Helen Albert, Mary Binkley, Grace Malloy, Frank Lego, Russell Keller, Raymond Roeder, Fred Binkley, Rose, Mary and Russell Blair.

Mrs. R. R. Shank, Woodlawn-ave, arrives home Sunday from Dayton where she visited during the past week.

Social Circle club will meet Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. J. Kennedy, 813 Oak-st.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hiner and Mrs. T. N. Cunningham are home from a winter's sojourn in Florida.

O. E. U. E. club will meet Friday afternoon with Mrs. Charles Morrison.

John Moke, Ohio State University, is the guest of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Beecher Moke, W. Spring-st during his Easter vacation.

Three Lima Girls Prominent In School Activities

Miss Madgalene Stolzenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Stolzenbach, W. Market-st, is a Senior at Mt. Holyoke college, South Hadley, Massachusetts. Miss Stolzenbach has been very prominent in the school's activities, assisting greatly in the organization and the furtherance of the splendid student government of which that school is justly proud. Miss Stolzenbach is specializing in chemistry and is president of the Chemistry club as well as the Ohio club. She graduated from the Lima Central high school in the Class of 1917, and is one of Lima's most popular young girls. Miss Josephine C. Purtscher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Purtscher, N. Metcalf-st, is starring in athletics at Mt. Holyoke, South Hadley, Massachusetts. She recently made the freshmen indoor basketball team, playing second base, and is said to be one of the fastest players. Miss Purtscher graduated from the Lima Central high school in 1920 and was one of the most popular and admired of the students. While in high school she engaged in athletics somewhat, but not extensively. Miss Dorothy Schell, a sophomore at the Dramatic School at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Schell, S. Pierce-st. Miss Schell has appeared in several plays given by the students at the school. The last in which she appeared was "Ship Ahoy," presented most successfully by the Division of Art of Carnegie Institute at the Schenley Theatre, Pittsburgh. Thoughts Turn from Sombre Season to Social Affairs by Mildly in Contemplation

THE beautiful lessons taught by the Lenten season are over and now with Easter in its passing, comes thoughts of summer's hot, unpleasant days, yet delightful in contemplation, for they afford food for thought.

It will be just a moment now until summer will be upon us, with its June brides and roses and lazy days, when all humanity yields to the impulse of the warm weather.

It is none too soon to think of vacations and summer picnics and outings, even if that thought only means a day at a time of fishing along brook, stream or river, or resting at a well-known watering place; or if the summer picnic includes but a day spent away from all the grind of weary toil, out close to nature.

Nothing is more exhilarating to the tired brain than to look at nature's pictorialization, to see the Master Hand of the Great Artist in the paintings of nature and to spend a day in the shade of the tall trees, in a cool spot.

May days usually bring these out-of-doors gathering and Decoration day the latter part of that month starts the ball rolling. The automobile provides an easy run to Lakeview or some of the watering places not far from Lima or it is again possible for the picnic party or a view of the fine countryside.

But those who have not a car, need not worry, for only just a short walk from the end of any one of the branches of the city street car lines it is easy to enjoy any of the beauties described above. The interurban lines carry one far beyond the heat and grime of the city and the return means clearer brains and happier hearts.

The scene is most charming just now and within a few weeks the wild flowers will be in full bloom and all nature will be resplendent in its loveliest colors.

Easter is but the beginning of this joyousness and as the gladness dawns, after the solemn and sombre days of Lent, telling of the sufferings and sorrow of the Master, so man too enters into it with an optimistic courage for anything.

Easter means budding life and as bursts the chrysalis of the Easter lily, so humanity enters into it equally as much as does the little flower and the glad sunshine, so symbolic of the joyous season.

18-POUND BOY ARRIVES

Mrs. Robert Embry's baby.

PORTERVILLE, Cal. — (Special) — California has produced some mighty big products in the agricultural and horticultural realm, but never before has she produced a human specimen which equals, or comes anywhere near, the size of the eighteen-pound and three-ounce baby boy which was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Embry, residents of Terra Bella, a little town of a few hundred souls, eight miles south of Porterville.

When the stork paid a visit to the Embry home for the seventh time on March 2, he left a fine "big boy." In fact, so big that the scales of the attending physician, Dr. C. A. Curl, failed to register the baby's weight. So a trip was made to this city for a new pair of scales, which showed the new arrival's weight to be eighteen pounds and three ounces. According to Dr. Curl, this is by far the biggest baby he has known in his many years of medical practice. State records which have been searched fail to show that another baby of this weight was ever born in the State of California. It is believed there have been but few, if any, babies born in the United States whose weight at birth exceeds that of the Embry baby.

Just why Baby Robert, for the baby has been named for his father, should have "turned out" such a big baby is still very much of a puzzle.

Saturday morning at 11 o'clock Mrs. Minnie D. Curless, special art teacher in this city, became the bride of Everyly L. Haines, Chicago, the Rev. Walter D. Cole, officiating. The bride was very lovely in a dark blue tricot suit and a hat to match. A corsage of violets completed her costume.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Haines left for an extended trip thru the south and west, after which time they will receive their friends at their attractive suburban home at Glenwood, one of Chicago's most beautiful suburbs.

Mr. Haines is secretary and general manager of the National X-Ray Reflector company, Chicago.

A delicious 6 o'clock dinner was served, the dining room being attractively decorated in white and lavender. Assisting the hostess throughout the evening were Mrs. James Henderson, Mrs. Myrtle Hoyer, Miss La Vaun Jewett and Mrs. Gago.

Guests included George Dunn, John Komutinsk, Helen Dunn, Mary Cutter, Helen Hoyer, Marion Dunn, Lester Evans, George Wood, Olivett Gager, Werner Henderson and William Bowman.

The mother and father are people of ordinary size, the mother's weight being about 140 pounds. Two other babies born into the Embry family, however, weighed twelve pounds at birth, and those were considered unusually big babies.

Mrs. Embry states that she has enjoyed splendid health all her life. Prior to Baby Robert's birth she was unusually well for an expectant mother, and experienced no unusual feelings except that perhaps she might become the mother of twins this time. Mrs. Embry has a sister, Mrs. John Gibe, of Tulare, Cal., who is the mother of twins. These twins, a boy and girl, together did not weigh as much as Baby Robert Embry at birth. There are now six living children in the Embry home.

Mr. and Mrs. Embry have lived in California about fifteen years. They came to California from Jennings, Oklahoma. Commenting on the interest created by the birth of her big baby, Mrs. Embry said:

"When the baby came so near being born on Inauguration Day — March 4 — some people thought we ought to name him for President Harding, as he turned out to be a boy. But my husband said he wanted one boy in his family to have his name, and as there might never be another boy after this big one, we decided to call the baby Robert Luther, for his father."

ONE OF THE GREATEST MOTION PICTURES OF THE YEAR

"Lying Lips," one of the best of Thos. H. Ince's Productions to be offered at the Sigma Theatre today. Buster Keaton in his latest and greatest comedies, "The Haunted House" the added attraction.

"Lying Lips," the Thos. H. Ince masterpiece, which is said to be better than his "Civilization" will be shown at the Sigma Theatre today, the picture you have long been waiting for, a vivid drama of life and love. This tremendous production is remarkably acted by an all star cast featuring House Peters and Florence Vidor. Romance, Love, Beauty and Melodrama. Spectacular and sensational episode and incident. A thrilling rescue enacted by the battleship "Minneapolis" and its entire crew. A production of tremendous scope and dimension. A story of the bitter and sweet from the cup of life. Personally produced and its amazing big scenes personally directed by Thomas H. Ince, who pronounced it to be bigger than his own picture "Civilization." Special effects to enhance the production, added to a special music score by orchestra and organ combine to make the picture all the more enjoyable. Added to the programme is that screamingly funny comedy "The Haunted House." Buster Keaton's latest and greatest comedy success.

Starting Monday afternoon, the 10 Lima girls entered in the Beauty contest will be shown in motion pictures at every performance.

"Doug" Fairbanks In "The Nut" Will Afford You Great Entertainment at the Lyric Today

It's a picture that's 'different', uproariously funny with a laugh and a thrill for every foot of film there is in it.

Look who's here! Can you imagine anything more delightful than the opportunity to see "Doug" Fairbanks in "The Nut" his very latest and funniest picture?

It is something 'different' for Fairbanks carrying all of the exquisite humor of his former efforts yet injecting a measure of seriousness that keeps you 'with him' all the time and hoping in spite of all his crazy doings that he will succeed in his effort. Fairbanks takes the role of an inventor in this picture and he has a sweetheart who has a hobby that threatens for a time to be greater in her estimation than is 'Doug' himself. This puts it up to Doug to do something that will win her favor and you may be more than well assured that before he is thru, he does it.

"The Nut" is a great picture for genuine, wholesome entertainment and diversion. It is without question the best amusement bet if you are not "with him" to the end hoping that his next effort at wooing will succeed.

The Ritz, New Theatre, Indicates Local Terminology Gone To Wreck

List Is Exhausted and Managers Using Own Names Now

Reviews of Latest Productions in New York Houses

(By F. F. Shrader)

NEW YORK.—Special.—This week marks the opening of another playhouse under the managerial direction of the Messrs. Shubert.—The Ritz. The name selected indicates that the penchant for local terminology has gone to wreck on the lack of suitable material. The list has been exhausted with the New York Theater, the Manhattan, the Hudson, the Knickerbocker, the Stuyvesant, the Langacre, etc. Some managers, not satisfied with appearing on every play bill as the man who "presents" such and such a star—usually in letters larger than those of the author—have named theaters after themselves in imitation of those old-timers, Daly, Wallack, etc., and so we have the Shubert, the Broadway, the Selwyn, the Harris, the Morosco and others, while now and then a manager finds a favorite star to himself by christening a new theater with an actor's name; but this always involves some risk. The 39th-st theater started out as the Nazimova and the Harris used to be called the Hackett. One quite popular theater in the Eltinge, so named by A. H. Woods; but years have passed since Eltinge, the female impersonator, and the manager parted company. The Maxine Elliott, on the other hand, is Miss Elliott's own property and she is indebted for the honor of bestowing her name upon it to no manager. Only two playhouses are named for the old families, the Vanderbilt and the Astor. The latest tendency is toward popular foreign titles, like the Ritz, the Rivoli, the Apollo, the Ambassador, and only a few of the many on Broadway and its approaches commemorate the fame of the playhouses of a departed generation. The only one I recall off-hand is the Bijou. New York hates to be reminded of its past, like certain people, with that sort of an appendage.

The opening attraction of the Ritz is John Drinkwater's second historical drama, "Mary Stuart." The title role is in the hands of Miss Clara Eames, and the cast looks good with Frank Reicher, Charles Waldron and Russ Whyatt in prominent parts. As the play is short, a pantomime, "A Man About Town," by Austin Strong, furnishes the curtain raiser.

Another attraction this week is Leo Diddrichstein in a comedy of Parisian life, entitled "Toto," which is a society pot name for Antoine de Tillois, bestowed by the fast set in which he moves. The piece is by Maurice Hennequin and Felix Duquenai, but the adaptation is credited to Achmed Abdullah, which shows the inroads made into our civilization by the sons of Syria, Persia or Turkey. "The Ghost Between," which is the new card of the Thirty-ninth theater, is not a ghostly play or a drama of materialization of absent spirits. It was a comedy and it was Taylor Homes who played the star part; but it has been converted into a drama, and the leading role has been handed to Arthur Byron. The ghost between, in a nutshell, is the memory of a dead husband who comes between, the young wife and the doctor who is her second husband. Finally, the Casino has a change of program, a musical play, "It's Up to You," with music by the late Manuel Klein.

I fear I am falling a little behind the procession, for it was not till this week that I discovered who the mysterious Michael Strange is who wrote "Claire de Lune," in which

At Regent theatre today.

Ethel and John Barrymore are soon to star jointly. Both on account of the importance of the stellar conjunction and the title of the play selected for the occasion, I concluded that Michael Strange must be the pseudonym of some distinguished Russian, on account of the Michael, and that we were destined for new regions of theatrical exploitation or undeveloped fields of thought. While all this may be realized when we are face to face with the goods, I confess to be somewhat sobered in my far-flung expectations by the discovery that Michael Strange is a member of the Barrymore family, Mrs. John Barrymore herself.

These Barrymores have a reckless way of rushing in where angels fear to tread. Sometimes they fairly over themselves with glory, but it is not inevitably the case. Having seen Lionel do some really big stunts I have not yet forgiven him for trying to play Macbeth and having seen a few Camilles in my young life, I dwell with fond recollections on Miss Barrymore's "Captain Jinks" after seeing her as Marguerite Gauthier. But nothing is farther from my mind than to forestall judgment. I like the title, "Claire de Lune," and I certainly have always counted myself a rooter for the Barrymore clan in anything they chose to do in the acting way. But it is just as well to face a problem of unknown factors with expectations not keyed above normal.

"The Love Birds" at the Apollo is more gentle of title than of substance and it is not exactly full of the melodious ripple of bird songs, but just a random combination of vaudeville, burlesque, jazz, pretty girls and dances. Strictly musical comedy it is not, for even this form of amusement has to keep within certain restraint, whereas Edgar Allan Wolff, who wrote it, evidently had an audience of the burlesque wheel in mind. As a show of that kind it will probably do very well for a while. The girls are certainly pretty and make a lavish display of shape. It is well that July has prematurely burst upon us. They would probably catch cold in normal weather for lack of clothing. Pat Rooney and Marion Bent are very good and one song of Sigmund Romberg, the "Two Little Love Birds" ditty, will be popular all over town. The show also has a charming prima donna in Elizabeth Hines and Elizabeth Murray with her songs and broad humor is among the popular members of a large cast. The two scenes carry us from a lingerie shop to a Persia harem, which tells the story.

Another tenuous offering is "The Right Girl" at the Times Square Theater, which turns upon the idea of a young man securing a marriage license for a wedding before he has obtained the girl's consent. It warbles its way thru three acts with the main reliance on music by Percy Wenrich, which is not half bad. Of course, it is well supplied with dances and the usual elements and attributes of its species, but it is intrinsically stupid. It is a sure sign of spring's approach, when these harbingers of the summer amusements make their appearance. They rightfully belong in the same general class as spring poetry.

Edith Ellis, the adapter of Karen Michaelis' novel, "The Dangerous Age," now tells what ought to be done to make Shakespeare popular. She severely condemns the process of destroying the chronological sequence of the scenes and suggests that the pruning be done in the text. She says: "I should like to present Shakespeare, stripped of much of that undergrowth of verbiage, and then wouldn't his plays just march on the stage! They would go down just as readily with the public as did the version of Moliere's 'The Imaginary Invalid' which I put on for the Coburns several years ago." In Chicago, she declares, they just ate it up at popular prices.

Miss Ellis is symptomatic. What all the great actors, from Garrick down to Forbes Robertson, found unnecessary, not to mention the great commentators, she purposes to do in an off-hand manner, just like that! One vital difference between Shakespeare and Moliere she forgets, to-wit, that Moliere is caviare to the general, while Shakespeare is part of our popular education, and Hamlet's soliloquy revived by Miss Ellis would drive most of us out of the theater. Whatever is omitted in Moliere is never missed, because hardly any of us know more than a prose translation of his work, while a considerable number of us who got as far as the high school have learned Shakespeare by heart and would hardly thank Miss Ellis for adapting him to the requirements of commuters whose taste does not soar above a musical comedy and who have about as much love for Shakespeare as the devil has for holy water. As an inspiration of spring it may do very well, but all the year around we prefer Shakespeare "as he was wrote."

I purposely defer a review of "Mary Stuart" to my next letter, as it is entitled to more than a hasty consideration. It is in parts interesting and tragic and it is well played. The selection of Clara Eames for the title role is a happy one, and her supporting trio acted up to expectations. Drinkwater has his own method, which was highly successful in his "Abraham Lincoln," and his method of treating the career of the Scotch Queen in two short acts is one of the interesting features of this essay. The curtain raiser pantomime is an amusing conceit and the combination of farce and tragedy revives a long-dormant practice which had a vogue when people used to go to the theater at 7 o'clock and stay until nearly midnight.

Leo Diddrichstein is the dominating factor in the part of a witty middle-aged philanderer in the Parisian war atmosphere, who in spite of his callous sophistication, is supremely devoted to his grown daughter, a paragon of innocence albeit she smokes cigarettes and listens resignedly to blasphemous and risqué stories; she has taken a vow never to marry until she has reconciled her father and mother. The story shifts from the surcharged atmosphere of Parisian intrigue to the pietistic home of the mother, peopled with sanctimonious persons, whose practices are in glaring variance with their professions, among whom the daughter becomes the object of an intrigue to unite her with a broken-down derolet. The first part of the comedy has some of the attributes of "The Great Lover"; the last part tames down into a solemn mid-Victorian cup-and-saucer complexity and makes it a performance of strong contrasts. It is Diddrichstein who keeps the vehicle on the tracks, and it is his individuality and artistic finesse that renders the evening an interesting event; this is a case where all's well that ends well. The part fits him like a glove, and whatever the dramatic shortcomings of the play, the literary ambition which he gives the character makes it an event.

The Regent Pictures

THE Regent's program for the week opens today with "The Great Adventure" in which the famous Lionel Barrymore has the leading characterization. The story was first written by Arnold Bennett in novel form under the title of "Buried Alive," and in that form it had a wonderful success. The author then himself dramatized the book under the name of "The Great Adventure," in which form it is attracting wide admiration.

The story concerns Prim Farli, a great artist who fears publicity and women more than anything else in the world. He is pursued by a celebrity hunting woman, Sophia Entwistle, who discovers him in Warsaw and in a weak moment he becomes engaged to her, but realizing his action, he flees to London. There his valet, Leek, suddenly dies and Prim conceives the idea of hiding his identity by posing as the dead valet. Leek is buried as the artist, Farli, in Westminster Abbey, with great pomp and splendor.

The newspapers publish obituaries of the great artist and his secret seems safe, until it develops that the valet Leek had carried on a correspondence thru a matrimonial agency with a pretty widow, Alice Challice. And he marries the widow under the valet's name.

Poverty forces him to paint. His wife takes his paintings to the corner picture store where to her surprise they bring large sums. She makes him keep on painting, and his works finally reach the art dealer who formerly handled his work. The dealer recognizes that Farli must be alive but keeps quiet. In the midst of this, it transpires that Leek had left a widow and two children, who eventually call on him, insist he is Leek and that he must return home with them.

The complications that arise from these situations are decidedly humorous and unusual. Certainly Mr. Barrymore as Farli has an ideal role in a story that sparkles with wit and humor. The supporting cast includes Doris Rankin, Thomas Braddon and Octavia Brooke.

The last four days will see "The Truth About Husbands" at the Regent. This remarkable photoplay is an adaptation of Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Profligate." The cast includes May McAvoy, Anna Lehr and E. H. Herbert.

BUSTER KEATON AT SIGMA

Perhaps the most popular of the two-reel comic stars is Buster Keaton, Metro's stone-faced laugh-maker, and in his newest comedy, "The Haunted House," which is an added feature at the Sigma theatre today, this popular young man is said to be doubly comical.

In choosing a haunted house as the scene of operations, Mr. Keaton has picked a subject that is replete with comical possibilities and if advance stories are correct, he has made the most of them.

"The Haunted House" will be shown at the Sigma in connection with Ince's "Lying Lips," in which Florence Vidor is starred.

THE NEWS WILL GIVE TAMS

Girls, have you seen the newest thing in head-gear, or rather, the newest thing in tams? No? Well, Priscilla Dean has invented a new kind of tam, the dearest, most comfortable and chic head-wear imaginable. And in her new picture, "Cousin the Law," which is scheduled to appear in the city next week, she wears one of the above mentioned tams.

The Lima News has conceived a plan to make the tams popular in Lima even before the picture comes here. So on next Thursday and Friday, a "Tam Girl" will appear on the streets of this city, wearing one of the tams which Miss Dean made famous. Of course you will want one after you see how charming they really are, so watch for a description of the "Tam Girl" where she will appear at the appointed hour on the two days, and what you must do and say if you would win one of the tams.

Only a limited number of these tams have been secured, so it will be a case of "first come, first served." It's going to prove a mighty interesting little game, this "Tam Girl" stunt, and if you want to benefit by it, be on the lookout for full instructions, which will appear in the columns of The Lima News in a few days.

QUEEN OF ROUMANIA COMING. Queen Marie of Roumania, the most beautiful queen in Europe, is coming to Los Angeles next October, where she will supervise the filming of her own works. She may even take part in one or more of the pictures.

THROUGH THE WORK DAY WITH HARDING Every Waking Moment of the President Is Scheduled

Sixteen Hours His Usual Effort at the Man Killing Job of Running the Nation, But Mr. Harding Plays as Strenuously

By EDWIN C. HILL.

Copyright, 1921, Washington, D. C., Saturday.

IT IS 10 o'clock—night. The Capital City, national nerve centre though it be, is dull, sleepy, motionless under the new moon. Pennsylvania avenue, one of the world's great traffic ways, is lonelier than Fifth avenue at 4 in the morning. Some thousands are hidden in the obscurity of the cinema theatres. The rest of the half million are in their homes or hotels, yawning, nodding toward bed. There is nowhere to go but bed, nothing to do but sleep. The bright oases to which men once fled in evasion of boredom have been lost in the sandstorms of reform—Stumacher's, where Col. Riskey had his great inspiration; Harvey's, which supplied ale comparable only to Jack's; Made's, the Shorehams, the Willards.

Work ceased five and a half hours ago. Four-thirty releases the vast army of toilers for Uncle Sam, and pretty much all energy of private control and sunlight operation follows the considerable practice of the Government. Four years ago, two years ago, there would have been in the city's centre some stir, some action, some color; a heartening echo of human voices. Now the principal difference between the city at night and the national cemetery across the Potomac is that the former is better lighted. At the east end of the avenue the Capitol, always most beautiful at night, looms with ghostly majesty, untenanted, uninhabited, except for somnolent watchmen. To the right and left of the east front rise the office buildings wherein is done the real work of law building. These are as lifeless as the tomb of Rameses. The far dung department piles, and heaps of industry by day, reveal no sound or movement of life. Westward in the avenue the dignified and reposeful White House shows a softy illuminated front, but there are none about except for the policeman on station and a Secret Service man quietly making a round of the grounds. In the whole picture of the city at night there is a curious suggestion of suspended energy of life withdrawn, work abandoned.

One Man Hard at Work

In City of Suspended Energy

But one man is hard at work. Entirely alone in the executive offices of the White House in an oval room with white wood-work and green walls, he sits at a big, flat topped mahogany desk, a small unlighted cigar between his lips, while he patiently attacks a great heap of letters and telegrams and confidential memoranda, the gist of a long day's work by his secretary and staff. A frown of concentration reveals the intensity with which he delves in the mass of papers, signs his name, permits marginal indorsements—often a simple "Yes" or "No"—or painstakingly writes with his own hand certain messages of the first importance that must go upon the telegraph wires before the night is done or into the mails early the next morning. Other men may go about their work, may receive their energies in parties with their friends, may settle down in an armchair with a favorite book, may give way frankly to weariness or ennui—not this man. Fate, somewhat assisted by his own urbanity, has placed him in a position where work is unescapable, where, indeed, he must toil far harder than men who receive ten times as much as he or a tenth as much. He is the hardest working person in the United States of America. His name is Harding.

Plays as Hard as He Works

After His Tasks Are in Hand

He has been up since 7 in the morning, and in the fifteen hours that have not yet completed his day's work for the Government he has faced and conquered a programme of appointments that would daunt hard-tolling captains of industry, Schwab, Teagle, young Rockefeller, Sabin. He will be at his desk an hour longer before he can think of bed, and if he is asleep at midnight he will be fortunate in these crowded days of the beginning of the new regime. It is often said, and with complete truth, that the Presidency is a mankilling job, a task beset by the ten thousand devils of nervous prostration, and it is already apparent that the inexorable, greedy machine is clutching him. Will Harding be able to protect himself, preserve his vitality, maintain his enthusiasm under the tremendous strain that aged or broke so many of his predecessors? Very probably. He knows how to play as well as how to work. Common sense, as well as inclination, counsel him that all work and no play would make Warren a dull boy, and there is about this matured and thoughtful man a kind of boyish exuberance in the physical strength and glowing health that Nature has endowed him with that demands pretty constant play.

For certain, almost set periods, the President will work more intensely and with more determined concentration than any man I know. For weeks on end he will apply himself, without thought of limiting hours, day and night, to such tasks as must be done. At Marion, in the heat of the campaign, and again at Marion, in the period of Cabinet building, he set a working pace that left his secretaries and stenographers fagged and listless. Almost daily, with rigid denial of the open air exercise he loves and that his big, healthy body demands, he held himself to his desk in the little office he maintained across the yard from his home from 8 or 9 in the morning until 11 or 12 at night. In those periods his application to an unbelievable amount of correspondence was interrupted and broken by callers, who came individually and in groups, distracting his mind, wearing down his nervous system, hammering at his patience. Yet he kept at the special tasks he had set for himself until he saw clear daylight ahead. Then he quit. He had reached his limit of physical and mental endurance and he knew it as well as his doctor knew it or Mrs. Harding knew it. He quit. He went away and played just as hard as he had worked. He rebuilt his body and restored the tranquillity of a jangled nervous organization. He got back to Harding normalcy so that he could smile freely again, tell a good story and listen to one and resume the intense labor his new station compelled.

Automatic Reaction Saving Of His Needed Vitality

This very keenness in gauging his own limitations and this almost automatic reaction to the warnings that Nature whispers faintly in so many men's ears are very apt to preserve him from the crushing burden of his office. He said to me on one occasion before the Presidency came to him: "I love to live. I love to work. All I have got to live with and work with is the body that God gave me. I'm going to take good care of that instrument." So that the time will come, some weeks or some months from now, when a very good friend of the President, a little subconscious monitor, will come up through the trap door that all of us have in the flooring between the obvious and the imperceptible, to whisper: "Time to play a little—you've gone far enough," and the President will heed the voice and gather up his golf clubs or fishing tackle (for these are about the only out of doors sports he is devoted to) and go out into the sunshine to catch up with himself. I have some reason to believe that the President has planned his future in just that way, for he has come to the Presidency as he has approached all other problems and tasks, with a pretty accurate and thoughtful estimation of the requirements and how best to meet them.

For the present he is utterly absorbed in work, the job of getting the ship of state under control so that it will steer by compass rather than by weather vane; the job of surveying and solving problems that affect the comfort and happiness of 105,000,000 people directly and that bear on the security of civilization itself. A most cursory inspection of the list of these problems is appealing when one thinks that the yea or nay of their handling lies with one man, really Harding himself. There is the whole field of foreign relations left upset and unsettled by the world war and the unsatisfactory peace of Versailles. There is Japan with delicate sensibilities and unrevealed ambitions; Mexico, with all that eight years of watchful waiting have knotted together for firm fingers to untangle; doubtful, suspicious Central America; the Latin American republics to the south; the allied debt; the necessity for translating into accomplishment a pledge to bring about an association of nations to preserve the peace of the world. In the domestic field there is the tremendous problem of making a tariff to keep factories busy and wages up while not discouraging foreign trade; the equally difficult task of revising internal taxation to bring in enough money for running expenses and interest payments, while lessening the burden that all workers stagger under; the naval policy; the army; reconstruction; reorganization of all the departments of Government; the plight of the railroads; the future of the mercantile marine. These are only a few of the great tasks the President is taking up.

Hungry Horde Seeking

To Ask for Many Places

And while his mind should be free and untroubled in an executive responsibility greater, it is generally recognized, than any that has existed since Lincoln's day, he finds himself two weeks after taking office distracted by a hungry army of place hunters, office seekers by the thousand. Even surrounded by the wall that protects our Presidents he cannot escape this burden. By wiles and stratagems, prayer and influence, some of them get directly to him, and for all he feels responsibility. There are many places that he himself must fill—diplomatic appointments and positions of high executive rank—that cannot be left to his aids, the heads of departments, and he himself must devote many weary hours to a study of character and competency of the persons recommended.

Following Harding Through A Typical Day's Work

These tasks are what brings him to his desk in the private office in the west wing of the White House at 8 or 8:30 in the morning, and keep him there often enough until 11 o'clock at night.

"I have never seen any new President tackle the job with as much energy and application as Harding, not even Theodore Roosevelt," Rudolph Forster, executive secretary, who has seen several Presidents come and go, said the other day.

Let us take a typical day of the new regime at the White House in this formative period of the Administration. Be sure at the outset that the picture is under rather than over colored. The President arises at 7 and rings for his valet. The valet's principal business is to apply razor to the Presidential chin, for Harding, a Middle Westerner and used to doing things for himself, requires little valeting other than that of a tonsorial sort. As he is shaved he glances over two or three morning newspapers, one of which the modesty of service forbids this writer to mention; another, a Washington paper. Usually the Marion Star, his own paper, the journalistic baby that he raised from a very puny prospect to a mighty good income payer, is ready at hand so that he can get the drift of the home town news as the razor goes scrape, scrape, and out what his old friends Jim Prendergast and Charley King have been doing, what's going on at the Court House, whether Lowell Guthrie has put over a big transaction in live stock, and what the interesting doings are at Gallon and Delaware and the towns around about Marion. This occupies about half an hour, and in this brief period very important telegrams requiring the President's instant attention are submitted to him.

At 7:30 he breakfasts with Mrs. Harding, who has long believed in the adage that early to bed and early to rise is a good thing for the wisdom and health of her statesman, and who formed the habit herself many years ago. At breakfast, whether he is alone with Mrs. Harding or house guests are at table, the President puts aside thoughts and cares of state. It is a perfectly homely, human conversation that runs around the table as the President enjoys the hot biscuits and honey that Inez, translated from the kitchen at Marion to the splendors of the refectory at the White House, knows so well how to make; or, if not biscuits, waffles made by Mrs. Harding herself. Here is the revelation of a real secret—that the First Lady of the Land is not too proud to go into the kitchen, herself and mix waffle dough as it should be mixed to the taste of her best patron, her husband.

Laddie Boy Caswell is escorted into the breakfast room by his proud chaperon, Mr. Wilson Jackson, pronounced brunette and everybody's subordinate until the arrival of the Alfreida provided him with a post of high responsibility and trust in the Harding Administration. Laddie Boy, a regular dog, trots up to the President's chair carrying a newspaper in his mouth, for they have taught him that engaging trick; delivers it with much prideful tail wagging and gets his back rubbed by the Presidential hand, together with a pat upon his head. It is characteristic of Harding that he loves dogs. The dog he loved best in the world was poisoned once upon a time, and he has never forgotten that departed friend. There will be more dogs than one in the White House before this regime ends, one surmises, because Mrs. Harding shares in the President's liking for man's best friend. She may acquire a Boston terrier.

Takes a Turn in the Open Before His Office Grind

At 8 o'clock the President takes a turn in the open air, sometimes on the south lawn, where the public is not admitted and where the Secret Service men draw the lines very tightly indeed. Off to the south, rearing nobly toward the clouds, is the Washington Monument. In the immediate foreground is the gently rolling, velvety sward and the tennis court to the left. There are policemen in this picture, but one doesn't see more than a couple of them, for their business is to be on the job as inconspicuously as possible. Policemen are very useful persons, but they cannot be said to be decorative. If an intruder happened by the merest of chance to penetrate to this lovely but secluded section of the White House grounds he would be apt to find himself surrounded in a twinkling by a corps of policemen. They are there, cunningly posted. As the President takes his turn Mrs. Harding may walk with him, or if not she is apt to appear on the stone porch that overlooks the lawn.

At about 8:30 or 9 the President goes to his private office—at the earlier hour if there happens to be a conference with Mr. Secretary Hughes on foreign relations problems, or with one or another of the department heads. By 9 o'clock the Chief Executive is hard at it, giving himself to a programme which has been prepared by his secretary, George B. Christian, Jr., and which covers all of the hours of the day. This schedule of callers is built on minutes, a precise and exact plan. If the caller is not on time the loss is his. Punctuality is a virtue in the new Administration. Unless he is a person of real importance in the Government or a close personal friend of the President he loses his turn and must do the best he can with the suave and competent Christian, for the programme rolls on. From 9 until at least 5, and sometimes until 6, the day is taken up in this inception period of the Administration by the reception of callers, callers coming singly, in twos and threes and in whole delegations. Here, for example, is a sample day:

- A. M.
9:00—R. B. Cresser and F. E. Scobey, Brownsville, Tex.
9:15—Representative Stump of Virginia.
9:30—Representative Fordney of Michigan; Representative Greene of Iowa.
9:40—Senator Cummings of Iowa; Representative Sweet of Iowa.
9:50—Senator Watson of Indiana.
10:00—Representative Robinson of Indiana.
10:15—Senator Smoot of Utah.
10:30—Representative Swope of Kentucky.
10:40—The Secretary of Commerce.
10:50—Senator Phelps of Colorado.
11:00—Senator Fendler of Washington.
11:00—The Speaker of the House.
11:15—The Secretary of State.
11:30—The Postmaster-General.
12:00—Senators France and Weller of Maryland.
P. M.
12:15—Representative Porter of Pennsylvania.
12:30—Representative Kelley of Michigan.
LUNCHEON.
2:00—The Chinese Minister, Sao-Ko Ai-fred Sze.
2:30—The Secretary of the Treasury.
2:45—Friends of Marion.
3:00—Senator New of Indiana.
3:15—Senators Calder and Wadsworth of New York.
3:30 to 4:00—Delegations.
4:00—Senator Hale of Maine.
4:15 to 4:45—Delegations.
4:45—The Attorney-General.
5:00—The diplomatic corps.

And finally about 6 P. M. on this particular day the President had a real opportunity to confer with Mr. Christian about important letters and telegrams that had arrived in the course of the day and to indicate the tone to be taken or the decisions to be made in replying. This, of course, is the formative period. After a few weeks (and one marvels that a human being can endure even a few weeks of the bombardment and the dislocation of thought) there will be fewer callers. The Administration will have bedded down. The President will have more time to give to problems of state. But as matters stand now about the only real time he has to get off by himself and think, to study the great puzzles of government, is at night, when the rest of Washington is about ready for bed and the life of the city has slowed down to less than a murmur.

Family Dinners in White House Much Like Those in Marion

He dines at 7:30 with Mrs. Harding and with such home guests or specially invited friends that may happen to be present. He is able to dismiss the cares of state from table—yet. The time will come probably, and within a few weeks, when he will not be able to do so. Now the family dinners in the White House are the same jolly, amusing gatherings that they were in Marion when Harding delighted to have at table the personal friends of himself and wife.

One of the President's many sides is engaging hospitality. Few men in active political life today have so many interesting or diverting reminiscences and diverting stories of politics, of men of affairs of the past generation—Mark Hanna, McKinley, John Sherman, Foraker—of the old lively days in Ohio. And in sprightly direction of table conversation Mrs. Harding, very alert mentally and extremely witty, is a most interesting complement to the President himself. They are fond of talking about the old days at Marion when Warren Harding was a fledgling editor, running a paper that was doing his best to die and get out of the world, and when Mrs. Harding kept his courage up, preached confidence every morning and herself went to work for the paper, reporting news and bossing the circulation, even spanking the newsboys when that was necessary.

At such times the President keenly enjoys a good story, especially a story about animals, and particularly a story about dogs.

The Hardings Retain All Their Old Time Graciousness

After dinner the President smokes a cigar or a cigarette, and if there are no engagements for the evening goes to his private office to think and to give attention to correspondence for which there had not been a minute in the daytime. At long intervals the President and Mrs. Harding go to the theatre, and when possible the President reads in their private apartments, while Mrs. Harding, who is fond of embroidery making and very skillful at it, makes the needle fly.

These duties and tasks monumentally piled upon him the President has approached with remarkable poise. Three weeks is much too brief a period for any kind of comment as to how his new responsibilities have fitted in to his temperament and personality, but he has impressed every one with the quiet confidence of his manner and method. He moves leisurely, yet accomplishes a tremendous amount of work. He maintains the same graciousness toward friends and acquaintances that marked his bearing before he came to the White House. He remains approachable—too much so, perhaps. His smile keeps the attractive quality that endeared him to the Senate and that smoothed his way in twenty years of political battling.

In perfect tune with Mrs. Harding he has brought to the White House an atmosphere of warmth and welcome that thoroughly pleases Washington. Visitors of all kinds and classes perceive that they are welcome. The gates of the grounds stand open for them. There are no policemen at their heels to nudge them this way or that. If they have cards, simple enough to procure from their Senators or Representatives, they have access to the White House itself and can roam at will through the rooms of state, even sit in the President's chair in the Cabinet room.

This was a course decided upon by Mrs. Harding long ago and in which the President heartily concurred. Their idea is that while the White House is their own home, and they are entitled to as much privacy as any other citizens, nevertheless their home is a great national institution, one of the most interesting and attractive in the land; that the people have a right to visit it and satisfy their curiosity about it. And as long as the public do not abuse the privilege it will be theirs.

Mrs. Harding brings to the White House certain qualities that are certain to make their impress—dignity with very real democracy, common sense, congenial and enriched by long experience in dealing with many kinds of people; swift alertness of mind that the President finds extremely helpful in his problems, the poise that her station demands, together with the charm of manner and graciousness that must enrich it and, perhaps, most important of all, a conviction that the atmosphere of the White House should be restored to the simplicity and quiet good taste of the traditional old days.

Our new First Lady dislikes to be conspicuous almost as much as she loathes sham and pretence. It is her way to remain in the background of the President's fame, quietly helpful. She would never dream, for example, of expressing, for publication, an opinion on government or political matters, leaving such expressions for the President and wholly confining herself to her own chosen sphere of influence and of activity.

She is deeply interested in problems of social justice and in all movements for the advancement of women, and she has certain plans touching on these matters that she hopes to see translated into accomplishment. She is especially interested in wounded and incapacitated soldiers and sailors, and intends to make groups of these welcome at the White House from time to time, at garden parties and the like.

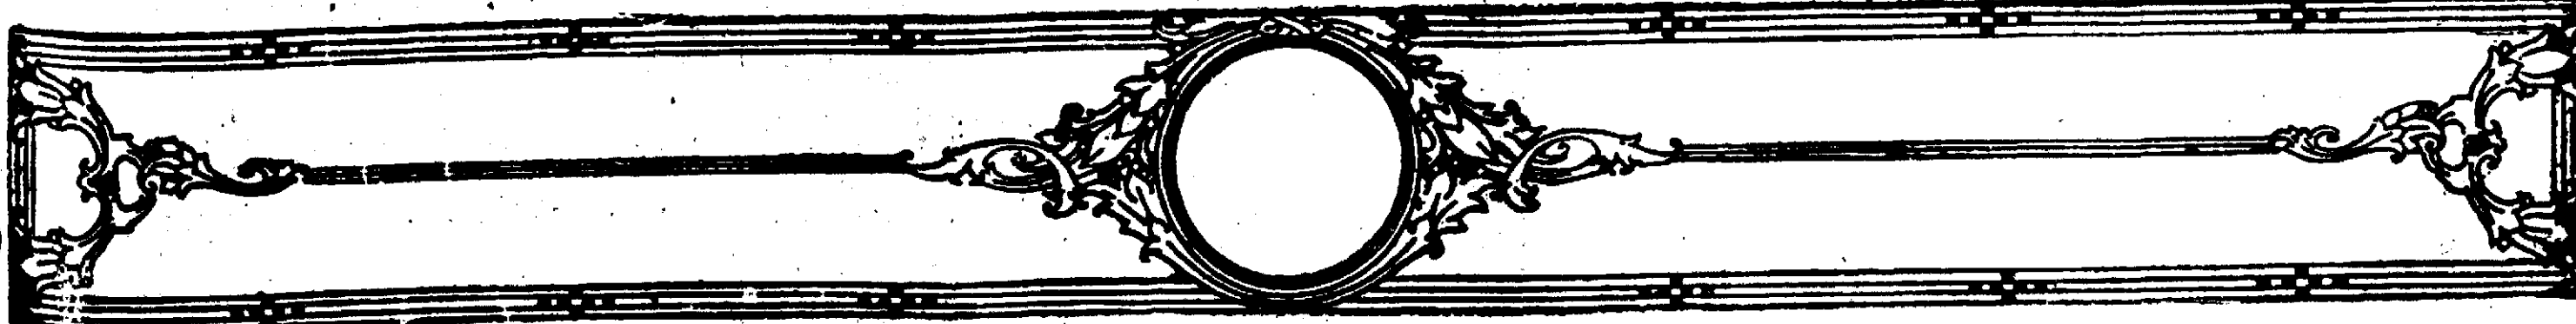

The President himself is not much more occupied than Mrs. Harding. Her days are run by a schedule and programme not dissimilar to his own, although her callers have to do with the social side of government or with welfare movements. Her correspondence is enormous. At Marion she received 500 letters daily, and since coming to the White House her mail has increased.

Innumerable people write to Mrs. Harding about their troubles and perplexities or to give advice about government or to criticize or commend the President or to say how the White House should be done over. Many of these letters are appeals for financial aid. To every letter she makes a courteous acknowledgement, and this alone involves formidable labor. She, too, is often up late at night struggling to get to the bottom of a heap of correspondence.

Mrs. Harding Is Looking For a Saddle Horse

Until recent years Mrs. Harding was fond of horseback riding, using a side saddle and long skirt of the old fashioned style. She wants to resume her riding and already has inspected the White House stables to select a likely looking horse. When she resumes the custom she will probably ride in the style that is now conventional, astride, and when the weather becomes settled and her initial responsibilities lessen she will be seen often on the bridle path in Rock Creek Park doubtless.

Both the President and Mrs. Harding have adopted a rule not to give interviews. I should say that they have decided to adhere to a rule that has run through many years. At the necessary times the President receives the newspaper correspondents and talks freely and frankly to them, but he is not to be quoted directly nor too indirectly.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

THERE is a distinctively optimistic trend to business all over the country and while as yet reflected only perceptibly in Lima, it is nevertheless reflected. Retail trade was on the boom during the week, and buyers for ready-to-wear houses have been making almost daily trips to the New York market for replenishments.

A great amount of repair work is going on in the residential sections in Lima, giving employment on odd jobs, but the building trades as a whole, are not under way. One big real estate firm has definitely decided to put up fifty cottages, it claims a big real estate firm will operate on vacant lots; and there is probably $50,000 that will be expended by mercantile houses within the next sixty days in new store fronts and fixtures.

Our biggest industry continues to operate on a reduced per diem schedule; the oil industry, offices, pipe line branches and refinery are going along at virtual capacity; and the cigar industry is still at capacity on almost all grades. There is some pick-up to railway employment but neither of the general shops have resumed full forces, while there are still idle trainmen.

Money continues excessively tight in banks and building and loans, but financiers expect some relenting on the part of the Federal Reserve Board on discounts within the next thirty days. Ratio of reserve is the highest in recent months, and should offer wider banking facilities. The stock market is creeping upward and the week saw a million-share day, always a barometer.

There are some slight increases in local payrolls of the truck and foundries division of industry, and the jobbing trade is much more active. Viewed conservatively, we are on the way. We will not have boom times, but we should have a fair run of business for the next three months, and every day may see something break favorably which will start the nation, which means starting Lima.

Prices as a whole were firm and unchanging during the week; no further declines in crude oil, a gradual stiffening in cotton and silks.

ECHOES FROM COLUMBUS

THERE is a well-grounded suspicion that Governor Harry L. Davis is finally hearing the rumbling of the juggernaut of public opinion from all parts of the state, as the frame he has engineered to get his reorganization code bill thru both Houses of the Legislature goes merrily on.

Evidence is afforded that not only the Governor, but the members of the Senate as well, are beginning to fear the wrath that may come from the Ohio electorate if the upper House puts the finishing touch on the Governor's measure that is to upset the entire state machinery, with an emergency clause attached, preventing the people from making it a subject for referendum. The measure has passed the House and is now in the Senate. In the meantime, there's little or no parceling out of jobs until the new code is assured.

Friends and enemies of the workmen's compensation law took each other's measure during the past week, with the result that what appeared to be a covert attempt on the part of the G. O. P. legislature to undo the law that means so much to workingmen, has been frustrated.

The House and Senate having failed to agree on a date for final adjournment, there is a possibility that Governor Davis will invoke his prerogative and tell the lawmakers when to quit and go home. It has never before been necessary for a Governor to use the law which gives him this right.

After disposing of important bills next week, it is expected that the House will recess until April 11, so that the Senate may have time to catch up in disposing of legislation. As time flies along and a survey of the accomplishments of the present Legislature are analyzed, the indifference of the populace generally as to when or how the bodies adjourn is not much different than applied to other similar bodies in the past.

DEBS PLEADS FOR RELEASE

GOVERNMENT officials at Washington made it possible a few days ago for Eugene V. Debs, prisoner in the Atlanta federal prison and widely known as the candidate of the socialist party a number of times for the presidency, to go to Washington to plead his own case in his application for release. He was unattended on his trip to the capital and on his return to prison.

Whatever may be the merits of Debs' case, the attorney general certainly erred in his action of granting special privileges to the convicted man. The fact that he undoubtedly would make no effort to escape can not justify the head of the legal department of the United States in allowing one man liberties hundreds of others in federal penitentiaries would be denied if they sought them.

Should a bootlegger, a counterfeiter or any other offender who is incarcerated under the federal laws apply for release it is not reasonable to believe that the government would order him released and hand him a round-trip ticket to visit the capital and personally present his arguments.

Our constitution guarantees equality and equal rights. If others now held believe they have reason to be given freedom and seek to furnish proof of their contentions direct to those empowered to grant their request, they will not be enjoying equal rights if the government refuses.

Mr. Daugherty says he takes full responsibility in the Debs case, altho the action was taken with the sanction of the President. He has made a big mistake and established a dangerous precedent that may cause him much worry.

IN WASHINGTON

SETTLING back in an attitude of "watchful waiting," the great mass of the people of the United States is anticipating the time when President Harding will get the new Congress into active service, on April 11.

The army of voters that rushed to the aid of the Republican ticket in the November, 1920, election is expecting something from the new administration. The transition from a state of prosperity to one of uncertainty, price cutting, wage reduction and value slumping since the election has placed millions in a state of apprehension, but very wisely they are not hasty in forming conclusions and there is a well-defined and commendable decision to await developments.

Much is expected by the new regime from tariff tinkering and anything that may be done is expected to be labeled an emergency measure. During the past week there has been no change of front on the part of Harding and his advisers in the matter of adopting the Wilson policies in matters of importance, particularly international affairs.

There is no revival of a suggestion of a separate peace with Germany, as the danger of such a procedure manifests itself more and more. Secretary of State Hughes was impressed with the expressed desire of the Russian Soviet to trade with America, but he studied conditions before rushing in. The Russian Reds are no longer bombastic, but have assumed a mild and meek manner. Evidence was sought as to whether the Reds had abandoned their ferocity or were simply disguising it. What was found impelled the administration to turn down the trade suggestion.

The season of movie picture making having passed in and about the White House and the administration getting its feet on the ground to some extent, questions of appointments are coming to the fore. The naming of Col. George Harvey as United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, England, expected to be announced soon, has stirred a wave of resentment among those who remember that it was Harvey's publication that printed the caricature of the Immaculate Conception in the campaign and which was reproduced in numerous party papers.

Harding disclaimed responsibility then, but the selection of Harvey for the English Ambassadorship has created a feeling that his disclaimer was not sincere.

BUY OR BUILD

OUT on a Lima street in a locality where property is not considered exactly top notch, a modest house, in fact, a house that in ordinary times would not be in demand, was vacated a few days ago. As soon as the moving van pulled up to the door the owner of the house was besieged by those who wanted to rent.

The house had been rented before the occupants started to move, as most houses in this city are nowadays, with the scarcity of rental property. After answering his telephone and door bell until he was weary, the owner had a sign painted, reading "Rented," and hung it up in the empty house to keep away home seekers until the new tenants moved in.

This is not a fiction story. It is truth and is only another argument in favor of buying or building a home immediately. Real estate men have shown how a man with a modest sum can purchase a home and pay for it at a rate less than rent costs. There is no reason why every man in Lima cannot buy on those terms if he has heeded the signs of the times and laid aside a small amount of his weekly pay check each week. It does not take two or three thousand dollars to swing a deal for a residence. In many cases two or three hundred dollars will suffice.

Those who are in position to build should lose no time in starting. Building on a large scale will bring better times. Materials are down, but there appears to be no reason for believing that they will go much lower, if any.

Money invested in homes in Lima affords one of the soundest investments to be found. Business conditions are improving. Local plants are getting their stride and men are going back to work. More people will be coming here as soon as they can find places to live.

HIGH FREIGHT RATES AND WHY

IF what former Congressman R. F. Welty said Saturday before departing for Washington to take up the gauge of battle in behalf of Ohio waterways is true and there is no reason to doubt it, there is something radically wrong with the transportation problems of the United States.

High freight costs is a nightmare for the manufacturer and Welty has diagnosed the disease as being simply a shortage of water transportation for competition with the railroads.

For instance, Welty says that farmers along the Atlantic coast receive 30 to 50 cents a bushel more for their wheat than do Ohio growers; that it costs $1,000 more to ship a locomotive from Lima to the Pacific coast states than it does to ship a locomotive from Philadelphia, on the Delaware river, connecting with the sea, to the Pacific states.

Due to lack of canals for competition with the railroads, Welty states that freight on fruits and fish from the Pacific states to Lima is $1.75 higher per 100 pounds than from the same states on the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard. This same lack of waterways forced us to pay several times as much for coal last winter than did Cincinnati, Welty says, where river barges were loaded at the mines.

In view of the proofs he has disclosed to public gaze, it is not surprising that Welty has been retained by the Manufacturers' Association of Cincinnati to give his time to development of sentiment in favor of canalizing Ohio.

TODAY'S HEALTH HINTS

By William Brady, M. D.

THE FEELING OF FORTY

When I was twenty years old I used to feel sorry for poor folks who had arrived at the advanced age of thirty. At thirty my sympathies went out to those unfortunates who had ten years less than I had still coming. At thirty-seven or thereabouts I firmly and highly resolved never to have another birthday. I peered forward at forty with an actual shudder. What a sad life it must be when you're forty, and only thirty years left to spend! To realize that in all likelihood you had already spent more than half of your fortune and there was no chance to recoup, for no matter what success you might have attained, there could be just so much left to spend! It didn't seem right. It was a most unhappy subject to cogitate late at night when you really should have been asleep. Not so horrible to think about in broad daylight, but it had a way of intruding on your thoughts around bedtime, this idea of the extreme brevity of human life. Of course death was not at all terrible, just the appropriate end of the play, and yet forty seemed a bitter pill to swallow.

Well, morning comes and dispels all these gloomy thoughts. And forty, after all, turns out to be not half bad. Indeed, it would be a happy enough event if some low, mean wretch did not go out of his way to call your attention to the prominence of the bald spot on your unconscious dome or to comment on the crow's feet about your eyes or your increasing girth or some such thing.

It is a sound idea to get into training a year or two before forty, so that you will have a good running start.

WHAT THE STARS PREDICT

This is a neutral day. Farmers should benefit by this rule of the stars, but will be upset by political disturbances unless they select their leaders carefully. Increased prosperity in mining conditions is indicated. Railroad interests are ruled by favorable stars, and should prosper during the next two years. Persons whose birthday this is, should be very cautious in their business affairs during the coming year. Those who are employed should make no change. Children born on this day will probably be careful, persevering and successful.

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrown nail reduces inflammation and pain and toughens the tender, sensitive skin under the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight. An Ohio cemetery has been presented to President Harding. This is no personal reflection at all, as it has been presented to twenty-two other presidents and they all have refused to use it. Presidents seem to be naturally superstitious about accepting that burying place.

In Cleveland a woman judge and a woman county prosecutor are acting in the case of a woman accused of murder in the second degree.

But, says H. E. Johnstone, of the "Public Ledger," since Mrs. Australia Croke is charged with only second degree murder, this makes it certain that Cleveland's first woman judge and woman prosecutor will not turn out to be crape-hangers.

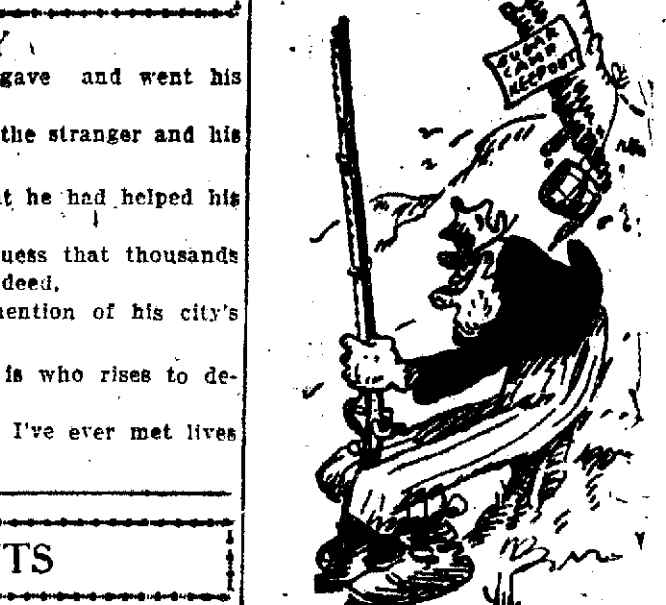

Dr. Copeland tells us that 100,000 families in New York are living with other families, and that this is all wrong. But it is sort of consoling to see somebody put it over on the landlords occasionally.

We are told by a scientist that England and Ireland were geographically one, some time ago, when there was no water between them, which is the most interesting scientific statement we have heard in some time. The party who dredged the Irish sea and put water between England and Ireland started a lot of trouble.

BUYING AT HOME.

The cablegrams from Paris say there's woe along Rue de la Paix. Yankee women who want gowns are buying them in Yankee towns. The first time in full many years that this has happened, it appears. And we will hope it's not a crime. For us to say, "It's almost time."

YOUR NAME

By PHILIP FRANCIS NOWLAN
VARIATIONS—Seller, Sealer, Seller.
RACIAL ORIGIN—English.
SOURCE—Occupation.
IT IS not possible to tell with accuracy in the individual case which of two sources these family names have come from, with the exception of the last named.
It may be taken for granted, however, that, like Sadler, the rest of them in the vast majority of cases come from the occupation of making saddles. The assumption that there is any connection with our modern word "seller," or salesman, is erroneous, for the medieval English did not use this word to designate tradesmen.
Sadler is a form of the name traceable to the Anglo-Saxon word, "sell," however, was the word most often used by the Normans in the early period to denote a saddle, and it endured for a long time. In fact, it did not become obsolete until after Spenser wrote:
"He left his lofty steed with golden sell,
And goodly gorgeous barbes."
The form Sellers, Seller and Sealer, however, may also be derived from the old word "sealer," which was the appellation of those craftsmen who manufactured seals.
Tomorrow—Oaler.

REAL ESTATE NEWS AND BUILDING OPERATIONS

BUY A LOT AND BUILD A HOME IS SLOGAN HERE AS OPTIMISM REIGNS

Rapid Recovery From Depression Is Apparent.

FUTURE LOOKS PROMISING

Housing Situation Can Only be Improved by Building.

Events of the past week have brought out a more optimistic feeling among owners and dealers in real estate. The outstanding feature was the announcement that the Torrance, Sowers, & Beamish firm, of Akron, had agreed to take over the sale of two new subdivisions here.

This news is important for the reason that this is not a small organization. The men in it are shrewd business men who have weighed the situation very carefully and have come to the conclusion that conditions in Lima are sound and that the future points to progress. Their decision was not made in a moment, but was the result of careful investigation and the confidence which they have can be shared by everyone.

DEPRESSION DISAPPEARING

Rapid recovery from business depression would seem inevitable because of the varied industries found here. Other cities such as Detroit or Akron prosper when the one great industry found in each prospers and in turn suffer greatly when a depression hits them. Lima has fared well so far because as one industry slowed down, another expanded to take up the slack in employment. Now, as the Locomotive and Steel plants are feeling the depression, the Gramm-Bernstein and the Garford truck plants are beginning to feel the activity which is permeating the whole motor industry.

Today, with the strength of the depression full upon the industries and with activity of all kinds at a very low ebb, there are less than a dozen really desirable houses for rent in the city. Real estate men say that they often receive as many as 50 calls a day, each, from people desiring to rent houses. If the housing situation is as serious as this now, what will it be when the factories are running at capacity? It will mean that rental property will be practically off the market.

PLAN TO OWN A HOME

In order to protect their best interests, all who are residing here and who are expecting to make this city their place of residence, should begin to lay plans to own their own home. This is not a difficult matter if the desire is present. If it is possible to find the home you like in the location you wish, every effort should be made to secure it. However, it may be that the money necessary for the first payment is not available. In that case, as was pointed out last week, two plans are open. A lot can be purchased in a desirable location and either paid for in full or by payments. Any extra money should be placed in a savings bank and kept until it is possible to start the building of the home. If the lot cannot be purchased or it is not desired to buy it now, the money on hand—should be placed in the bank and added to as often as possible. The money will be safe and at the same time will be made available for builders and buyers who are in the market.

HOUSING PLANS

Every effort is being made by business men in the city to secure money for building operations. A special housing committee from the Chamber of Commerce with Fred Williams as chairman, is investigating methods employed by different cities throughout the country with the hope of finding one that will apply to the condition here. The one method that is the most efficient and economical is by loans secured thru the building and loans and kindred organizations. For these to operate however, it is necessary that money be deposited with these banks. As soon as possible the family budget should be adopted to the readjusted wage scale and living costs, and the regular weekly savings started. With the money saved, a home may be secured or any other desire satisfied. The home should be the paramount desire.

One phrase that would sum up all that has gone before would read: "Be Bullish on Lima." Money is tight now, but gives every indication of becoming easier as time goes on. Work is scarce today, but as soon as the readjustment is completed laborers will be in demand more than ever before. If you can't buy your home today, buy a lot. At least start the savings account that will mean a home someday. Others have confidence in the future and even business men from other cities are attracted by the promise offered by Lima. Cash in on the future and "Be Bullish on Lima."

Real estate deals for the week included the transfer of some important property. E. A. Dean and S. Flowers purchased the Laverne apt. on N. Elizabeth-st. from W. J. Ritchie, who received in part payment a 75-acre farm on the Dixie Highway near the Garford plant. The farm will be divided into acre lots and disposed of thru the Torrance, Sowers, & Beamish Co. The Elmer D. Webb Co., handled the deal.

A public square lease changed hands. Wednesday, when the Dreamland theatre passed out of the hands of George Mailers, Cook & Anderson, of Sidney, purchased the lease and expect to fit up the room for an up-to-date sandwich shop. This deal was also handled by the Webb Co.

H. N. Piper has purchased the Harry Zurnehly home on N. Charles-st. Motter and Green handled the deal.

A house at 142 W. Fourth-st. has been purchased by Blanch Curry

Good-bye, Housecleaning!

What a dreadful job housecleaning is! It's clean, clean, clean — from garret to cellar, and what an awful mess it makes! There's furniture stacked up here, a rug yanked up there — till "Home, Sweet Home" hits a minor key.

How utterly unnecessary it is to go on with that old-fashioned method!

With a Torrington Electric Vacuum Cleaner you can rid yourself of that semi-annual household ogre. The strong suction and positively driven carpet-sweeper brush will knock this household bugaboo "galley-west."

Come in today and see how easy it is for you to keep a clean house without hard work.

Household Work Done With Electricity

NOW VENTILATE BY ELECTRICITY

Using the Grill to Prepare Appetizing Meals Quickly.

The need and practical value of fresh air is so generally appreciated nowadays that electric ventilating fans are being used in great numbers in homes, offices, stores, factories, hotels, and everywhere, in fact, where people work or congregate. The electric ventilator fan will not only refresh the air, but it will also keep the room cool in summer and warm in winter.

Breathing good clean air has an invigorating effect on health. Each person needs from 1,500 to 2,000 cubic feet of pure air per hour. In a room of 100 cubic feet, with a ventilator of 20 cubic feet per hour, the air is changed only once in 10 hours. In a room of 100 cubic feet, with a ventilator of 200 cubic feet per hour, the air is changed every 10 minutes. In a room of 100 cubic feet, with a ventilator of 2,000 cubic feet per hour, the air is changed every minute. In a room of 100 cubic feet, with a ventilator of 2,000 cubic feet per hour, the air is changed every minute. In a room of 100 cubic feet, with a ventilator of 2,000 cubic feet per hour, the air is changed every minute.

spreading many epidemics of throat and lung diseases.

An ordinary gas jet burns up as much life-giving oxygen as four persons would require. A gas range with two burners in use takes as much fresh air as 25 persons. It is readily apparent, therefore, why rooms in which gas lights, heaters, or stoves are used, require a free circulation of air.

Ventilators which depend upon the movement of the outdoor air for operation are unreliable, for they are most needed at times when there is not even a breeze stirring. The electric ventilator, with its closed motor, set in a window or in the wall, is constant and dependable day in and day out. It supplies the "fresh food" which is so essential for all.

PERCOLATOR PUT TO A NEW USE

The electric percolator served a good purpose for the baby one day recently in a small Pennsylvania town. A family newly come to the community was living in a boarding house when one night the baby, according to the habit of babies, came down with the croup. The doctor advised the mother to have plenty of moistened steam in the room. But the living room was closed and no group kettle was to be had.

At this point, ingeniously and the electric percolator came to the rescue. The mother had added a touch of home atmosphere to their quarters by having her percolator always at hand. And so she placed some water to boiling, laid a piece of screening over the top, and placed on it some cotton soaked in "medicine." Her electric "vaporizer" was complete.

LITTLE THINGS ARE CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Frequently when a housewife thinks that something is wrong with her electric cleaner, the dealer finds it is merely that the bag is too full of dirt or that some obstruction in the nozzle or brush is preventing a rush of air. To overcome dissatisfaction of this kind, one manufacturer has issued a list of "things to do when your cleaner will not work properly." The suggestions are as follows:

See if the current is turned on at the lighting fixture and make sure that the plug is screwed tightly into the electric light socket.

Make sure that your lighting fixture is in good working order by testing it with an electric light bulb.

Be sure that the bag is not too full. The bag should be pressed forward, so sure that the bag is not too full of dirt and that the discharge vent is not by any manner stopped.

Make sure that there is nothing in the nozzle of the machine obstructing the rush of air.

If by any means you do not discover where the difficulty lies, communicate with the dealer from whom you bought your cleaner, or write directly to the manufacturer.

who do not when visiting the home of my ancestors in Bristol, R. I."

The electric grill, with two pans which may be used at once, is a boon for the small household or for informal meals in any home. The outfit usually includes a flat "reflector plate," which should be used carefully. When cooking is being done beneath the heated coils it should be placed on top to throw the heat downward. When cooking above, the plate should be placed beneath to prevent waste of heat.

If both pans, above and below the heating element, are in use, the plate may be used as a cover.

The following are menus for an entire day's meals which have been successfully prepared on the grill:

FARM WOMAN IS ELECTRICITY USER

A Boston publishing house sent to a number of farm homes a set of questions asking for information about their experience with coal oil stoves. One Kansas woman wrote an apt reply, resenting the implication that farmers should necessarily be so far behind the times. She said:

"Dear Madam:
"Your favor, asking various questions, is duly received. I think I shall answer them in my own way. I am pleased to realize that you, living in an age of electricity, are inclined to sympathize with us outer barbarians, of whom you confess you are ignorant, and conceive of us as still living in the age of coal oil stoves. As a matter of fact, water runs down hill here, very much as it does in New England, and a group of gentlemen, observing that it might generate electricity, as with you, and so installed a plant, with the result that we farmers also light our homes, cook our meals, wash, iron, churn, grind our grain pump water, and milk cows by electrical power, very much as doubtless your farmers do, altho I have noticed a great many

HEAD SCARF CAUGHT IN CLOTHES WRINGER COGS MINSTER WOMAN DIES

MINSTER—Mrs. Anton Massing, 38, was strangled to death here Tuesday when a scarf she had tied about her head while doing the family washing, was caught in the cogs of a wringer on an electric washing machine and her head drawn against the machine.

The woman's husband is an employee at the Minster Machine Co. plant and the children were absent from home, employed or at school, save a small child, too young to realize what had happened. Children returning from school found their mother dead.

That she had made a desperate effort to release herself from the start was evidenced by the fact that there were abrasions on her hands and the washing machine and a tub of water had been overturned by her struggles. Mrs. Massing was the mother of seven children.

Prima

WASHES BY SURFACE TENSION

Washes Nature's Way — by Surface Tension — Saves half the Time and all the Clothes!

By taking the simple basic principle of Surface Tension and developing that one principle to the point of mechanical perfection we have produced the perfect washing machine—the Prima. There are no complications to cause loss of time—or to tear the clothes. It is all surface tension! The water is continually churned—causing it to be broken up with a rapidity that literally sucks the soil from clothes. You are astonished at the speed with which this machine cleanses clothes. Yet the most delicate fabrics are never injured.

Furthermore, this machine is easily operated—easily kept clean—and is so strong and durable that it will wear a lifetime. It costs less for electric current—considerably less than any other machine—yet it is far more efficient. The Prima is not designed for beauty, because it is not used in a parlor. But it is built for easy work—quick work—and a long life of satisfactory service.

HARMAN'S

From the deep folds and softly cushioned surfaces of even the finest upholstery, all lint and dust may speedily be suctioned away by the air attachments of The Hoover. But for the vastly more difficult task of cleaning rugs, so as to prolong their life, The Hoover brings into play all three of its forces. Gently it beats out all nap-cutting, embedded grit. Briskly it sweeps up all clinging litter, erects matted nap and freshens colors. Vigorously it cleans by air. Only The Hoover discharges all these duties. CAPITAL GAIN HELD TAXABLE BY U. S. COURT

Increased Value of Investment Comes Under Income Act, Says the Decision—Profits and Corporate Bonds are Also Included In Ruling

WASHINGTON.—(By Associated Press.)—Increase of value of a capital investment is taxable as income under the revenue act of 1918, the supreme court today held. The court ruled that the transaction showing an actual loss could not be taxed since there was no "gain" derived.

The court's decision was given in the appeal of David M. Goodrich, from a ruling of the internal revenue bureau assessing him upon the increased value of stocks purchased prior to 1913. Action of the revenue officials was affirmed by the supreme court in the transaction showing a gain.

PROFITS TAXABLE
Profits realized from the sale of assets of a trust fund are taxable under income and excess profits law, the supreme court held today.

The decision of the court, directly affects several cases now in litigation affecting thousands of trust funds. It was given in the appeal brought by the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company as trustees of the estate of Arthur Ryerson, citizen of Illinois.

TAX ON BONDS
Increase in the value of corporate bonds, originally acquired and held for investment, is taxable under the revenue act of 1918, the supreme court also ruled today.

The supreme court reversed the decision of federal courts of Connecticut on the question of whether an income tax could be levied against an increase in the value of securities purchased and held as an investment, but ruled that the tax could only be imposed on the actual gain.

11 BODIES FOUND IN MURDER PROBE

Remains of Negroes, Chained Together, in Georgia River

RESULT OF PEONAGE, CHARGE

Farmer Accused of Slaying Men in Confession

MONTICELLO, Ga.—(By Associated Press.)—State authorities were planning today to push their investigation of alleged peonage practices in Jasper and Newton counties following the recovery of two more bodies of negroes from the Alcovy river here, making a total of eleven bodies found after the authorities began investigation of peonage and murder charges against John Williams, a Jasper-co farmer. The last two bodies found yesterday were chained together and weighted down with racks and iron, precisely as were the first three previously recovered from the river.

PROBE UNDER WAY

Appointment of General Denney to take charge of peonage inspections in the two counties was being considered today by Governor Dorsey at the request of Solicitor Campbell of Newton-co.

Following a coroner's verdict yesterday at an inquest over eight of the bodies declaring the slain negroes met death at the hands of Clyde Manning, a negro employed by Williams, and naming Williams as an accessory, Judge Park of the Ocmulgee circuit court was awaiting orders from the governor today to call a special term of the Jasper-co superior court and bring the two men before a grand jury.

CONFESSION MADE

Manning who led the authorities to where the bodies were recovered, declared in a confession that the eleven negroes, five of whose bodies were found buried on the Williams plantation Saturday and three previously in the Alcovy river, were slain five at his own hand with an axe in order to prevent them from testifying in peonage charges against Williams.

PAY RAISE DENIED

Labor Board Dismisses Appeal of Rail Men

CHICAGO.—(By Associated Press.)—The United States railroad labor board today dismissed appeals for increased wages filed with it last fall by fifteen railway labor unions against the "sixty-seven short lines" throughout the country.

Short lines which accepted for their men the terms of the $500,000,000 wage award of last July will not be privileged to go back to the old scale, under today's action, however, the announcement of the board saying: "This decision shall be considered as affecting any wage increase now in effect nor any agreement regarding wages between any of the carriers and their employees."

WOMAN PAYS VISIT TO DEAD IN PIT

Nightly Rendezvous in Chicago Puzzles Police

BODY OF MAN IN CRYPT

Female Frequenter to Place However, Disappears

CHICAGO.—(By United Press.)—Police today were searching for a slender, well dressed woman who had a nightly rendezvous with death in a sidewalk crypt.

Walter Jonas, factory night watchman, for the last few days had noticed a woman slip into an alley, across a vacant lot and then go under a sidewalk which is elevated ten feet.

Early this morning, he followed her. He looked in the sidewalk crypt and saw a crumpled form. He thought it was that of the woman and called the police.

Search lights flashed and the body of a man was found. The woman had disappeared. The man was well dressed. His head rested on a bundle of underwear. In his right hand he clutched tightly a rosary. Scars were on his head.

In his pocket was a scrap of paper with this written on it: "Mrs. Schultz, 1543 - Carroll Place."

Mrs. Schultz was located. She said she had given a stranger bread and coffee a few days ago when he begged for food.

"He said he was searching for his two daughters," Mrs. Schultz said.

THEATRE BILL UP WEDNESDAY

Sunday Movie Measure Comes Before Ohio Assembly

COLUMBUS.—(By Associated Press.)—After disposing of the proposed taxation amendments to the constitution and the election code question this week, the lower house of the general assembly will be ready for adjournment, but instead will recess until numerous house bills now before the senate have been acted upon. Both houses convene this afternoon.

Important measures before the upper body include the reorganization bill, the minimum wage bill, appropriation bills, Americanization bill and the occupational disease bill. The Taylor bill, seeking to regulate Sunday afternoon movies, is scheduled for resumed discussion in the house Wednesday afternoon. Opponents of this measure last week won a point when they forced the postponement over the week-end of final consideration of the bill. This action was for the purpose of ascertaining the views of churches on the question.

FLOODED RIVER IS ACCOMMODATING

"Haw Creek" Aids Contractors in Removing Bridge

When a flood moves a bridge it generally means a loss of money to somebody but the Ottawa river Sunday night added the Lima construction Co. in its work of removing the Elm-st bridge.

A new bridge is to be built and the Lima Construction Co. had started to move the old one, but it cut in two and dropped it into the river. Then high water caused by the constant rains of the past few days carried the old structure down stream for a hundred feet and deposited it upon the bank ready to be torn apart when the water recedes.

The city will receive bids for the purchase of the bridge. The Lima Construction Co. has bid $100 for it.

The rains not only brought Ottawa river to flood stage but flooded several streets in the northern section of the city where relief sewers have been constructed. Many complaints were received from the northern neighborhoods to city officials Monday morning.

The new relief sewer proved its worth in the west end where all is now dry where once every cloud burst gave birth to street-rivers.

PRISON STORY REVEALS BROTHER'S FIDELITY

COLUMBUS.—(By Associated Press.)—"I am my brother's keeper," is the feeling of the brother of James Connors, penitentiary prisoner, who recently walked away from the prison farm at London.

The brother has offered Warden Thomas to serve until Connors is apprehended, if that will mitigate the latter's punishment.

"I was my brother's keeper," is the feeling of the brother of George Mendel, who walked away with Connors.

He has offered $500 in addition to the state's $50 reward for Mendel's re-arrest.

JUNE IS EXPECTED TO SHATTER ALL RECORDS FOR BLUSHING BRIDES

WASHINGTON.—June this year, is expected to break all records for blushing brides. Approximately 100,000 women will go to the altar during that month, unless the data collected by the census bureau proves untrue.

The year 1921 will bring more than 2,000,000 young men and women within the bond of matrimony, it was predicted today. The United States, which recently was discovered to be the greatest bachelor country of the world, seems on the verge of acquiring distinction as the most married nation.

Love's young dream is bursting into full bloom throughout the United States than ever before, despite business depression and the falling wage scale. Romance is flourishing with the spring, as always, but seemingly spring in history has so echoed with wedding bells. Falling prices throughout the country may be one of the factors encouraging the rush into connubial bliss, it is believed.

TORCH APPLIED BY MOBS IN ENGLAND

Special Guards Posted in London As Fires Spread

MOTOR LORRIES MOBILIZED

Action Follows Discovery of Sinn Féin Plots

LONDON.—(By Associated Press.)—Campaign of incendiarism in various parts of the country is assuming such proportion that the authorities of Scotland Yard are mobilizing a fleet of motor cars and lorries to 1000 men to any point where there is a call for their services. This plan is similar to one adopted here recently when many incendiary fires were set in London.

The Evening Standard asserts that further Sinn Féin plots to destroy buildings on the outskirts of London have been discovered.

Special detectives were posted last night outside of government buildings and number 10 Downing-st, the official home of Prime Minister Lloyd-George, and special precautions were taken by the Bank of England.

Farm buildings numbering 20 were burned in the New Castle district, while other fires occurred at St. Albans and in Hertfordshire, Beaconsfield and Buckinghamshire. Near the ruins at a number of places empty oil cans were discovered.

BRIDGES CLOSED BY FLOODS

DAYTON.—(By Associated Press.)—Rise of the Miami river this morning to a nine foot stage caused city officials to issue an order closing the Dayton View and the Herman-ave bridges to everything but pedestrian traffic.

With the Third-st bridge closed for several months since the collapse of two piers, the city now is minus the use of three bridges.

Order closing the two bridges today was not on account of flood danger, it was said, but as a measure of precaution against collapse thru defective piling. The city has been taking soundings of the bridge piers to guarantee their safety and that is impossible with high water now prevailing.

A bridge expert condemned the Herman-ave and Dayton View bridges and steps have been taken to repair them.

A 14 foot stage is predicted for the river, while 18 feet is the danger stage.

RIVE AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS.—The Scioto river has reached 12 feet here today, but there is no danger of a flood, weather officials said. Flood stage in the days before the river channel improvement work was started was 17 feet, but it will take more than 20 feet of water to cause alarm now.

Cold weather will check the river rising, Weatherman Alexander said.

FIREMEN SPRUCE UP IN NEW DUDS SUNDAY

Despite the rain that put a quietus on Easter Sunday, members of the Lima fire department stepped out in their new spring uniforms.

Persons who passed the station Monday stopped and gazed at the sporty looking laddies, who are as proud of their new duds as a kid is with a little red wagon.

Mendel and Connors were placed on the farm at the request of their brothers, that they might be permitted to make good.

The strange story of the one brother's fidelity, and of the other's regard turning to anger when he found his confidence betrayed, came to light today. In letters to Warden Thomas.

Both brothers expressed keen regret, at the escape, feeling that their confidence was betrayed to the warden.

Mendel's brother is a prominent manufacturer of the state. He denounces his brother as an ingrate and said that their father had left $8,000 in trust for Mendel when he should be liberated.

MRS. STILLMAN IS "HAPPY NOW"

"Best Easter in Years." Banker's Wife Declares

HER PAST ONLY "BAD DREAM"

Woman's Lawyers Belittle the Stories From Canada

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—(By United Press.)—"I've had such a happy Easter, Mrs. James A. Stillman declared today.

Mrs. Stillman apparently dismissed her divorce suit from her mind entirely to revel in the Easter sunshine with her children.

"It's one of the happiest Easters I've spent in years," she declared. "So many of my friends have written me beautiful letters assuring me of their love and friendship.

"I have had my children with me. They are well and happy. The other things are bad dreams. These are the realities."

LAWYERS' PLANS
It was reported today that Mrs. Stillman's lawyers expect to have preliminary testimony in the suit ruled out. They will base their motion on the charge that its publication in the newspapers was an unprecedented irregularity.

The alleged testimony, dealing with reported scenes of the Stillman camp, in Canada, was belittled by persons familiar with life in that summer home.

The territory were unfriendly to Mrs. Stillman because of a dispute over the building of a boat house. They were hostile to Fred Beauvais, who superintended affairs for Mrs. Stillman, they said, because of his domineering way and the fact that he would not permit profiteering.

WOULDN'T DARE PERP
"They wouldn't have dared to peep around the house," one declared of the alleged statement by a witness that he had seen Mrs. Stillman and Beauvais in a room at the summer home.

"Beauvais is a terrible man when he's angry. I've seen him fight. He broke a man's jaw with one blow. No man in Grand Anse would have dared peep thru a keyhole or climb ladders to watch Fred."

The same person described the sleeping quarters at Grand Anse, saying Mrs. Stillman's room was at the head of the stairs and that Beauvais occupied the next one, the least attractive in the building. The only hot air register was in the hall, it was stated, and all doors were left open on that account. Any movement in the halls would have been easy to detect, it was said.

WOMAN ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF ROBBERY

YOUNGSTOWN.—A woman registered under the name of Mrs. E. S. Gordon was arrested at a hotel here today after police investigated reports that she had robbed men whom she inveigled to hotel rooms in various cities.

Telegrams and letters addressed to various names at hotels in a number of cities were found in her possession. Divorce papers found indicated that her real name is Lucy and that she comes from Pontiac, Mich.

GRENADES GO OFF

Explosion Takes Place as Fire Rages At Sherman

CAMP SHERMAN.—(By Associated Press.)—The explosion of 2,700 hand grenades stored in a building adjoining the grenade school was the spectacular feature today of a fire which for a time threatened to destroy the entire fourth area of the camp.

The grenades were discharged in quick succession as they were caught in the flames and sent fragments of shells flying in all directions. The crowd scattered right and left as the explosions began. One man was slightly injured and a soldier was overcome by the smoke. The origin of the fire has not been determined.

Loss of $20,000 covers the damage to the grenade school, the 27 millimeter school and the Fortieth Service Club. Three buildings were destroyed. Several of the barracks buildings were damaged. The camp Sherman firemen were augmented by the Chilli-cothe fire department.

RESUME DUTIES

Miss Jessie P. Miller, marriage license clerk at the Allen-co courts, was able to resume her duties in the probate office Monday, after an illness extending over several weeks.

Both brothers expressed keen regret, at the escape, feeling that their confidence was betrayed to the warden.

Mendel's brother is a prominent manufacturer of the state. He denounces his brother as an ingrate and said that their father had left $8,000 in trust for Mendel when he should be liberated.

SAYS BOOTLEGGER SOLD HIM BOOZE ON MAIN-ST. FOR $5 A PINT; FINED

William Walsh, 19, of 927 N. West-st, told Judge Emmett Jackson in criminal court Monday morning that he purchased a pint of booze from a bootlegger on N. Main-st Saturday night for $5.

"Who was this man," the Judge queried.

"I don't know," replied the young man.

"That's funny," remarked the magistrate. "They all say that and I have never had a whiskey peddler to stop me on the streets here and offer to sell me liquor."

Walsh was arrested at High and Main-sts. by Officer Landwehr. He was fined $5.

"DID HAMON GET JUSTICE?"-ISSUE

Clara Not Tried For Killing Him Juror Says

SECRET IN CASE REVEALED

New Phase Brought to Light by English Writer

NEW YORK.—(By United Press.)—"Clara Smith Hamon did not face trial for murdering Jake L. Hamon, millionaire oil man and politician," said Gilbert K. Chesterton, English author, today, in giving his impressions of the famous case exclusively to the United Press.

"A layman told me," explained Chesterton, "that what they had to decide was 'Should Hamon have gone?'"

"The answer being affirmative. 'Was Clara the best instrumental-ity?'"

Chesterton writes crime stories. He said he reads no other kind of literature, with the exception of Bernard Shaw, "whose stories are crimes."

"The lure of a fine plot drew me to Ardmore, Okla.," declared the author. "The amazing mysteries of American jurisprudence and a persistent oil stock salesman, held me there until the trial was concluded."

"In England," stated Chesterton, "we would have been reluctantly forced to hang the young woman. Which scores a point for American legal procedure."

"The homicide rate in England is disgustingly low for a hard-working detective story writer in search of a plot from real life."

Chesterton said if he had been writing the plot he would have had Hamon kill Clara so that he could have had the devilish glee of fastening the crime on the guilty party.

PAY CUT HELD UP

Railroads Await Board's Decision, Answer to Suit

COLUMBUS.—(By United Press.)—Railroad representatives in answering a suit of T. & O. C. shop laborers to restrain a reduction in pay, announced today that wages would not be cut April 1.

Present scales of maintenance of way employees and shop laborers will continue until the case is reviewed by the United States railroad labor board, attorneys for the companies said in answer to the injunction petition before Federal Judge Sater.

Randolph W. Walton and W. S. Pealer, attorneys made the announcement for the railroads.

Federal Judge Sater deferred decision on the injunction on the petition, in view of the statement.

The suit was brought by Cecil Jewell, vice-chairman of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Shop Laborers. Jewell was one of those affected by the plan to reduce wages April 1.

Jewell contended an attempt to cut pay would be in violation of the United States railroad board's awards.

WORKMAN BURIED IN EARTH SLIDE

Tons of Clay Fall on Men in 30-foot Trench

ONE IS TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Recent Rains Blamed for Disastrous Slip

One workman was seriously injured and two more were slightly hurt when a side wall of a sewer under course of construction at High and Cole-sts caved in upon workmen working thirty feet below the street surface at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Frank "Frenchie" Spiro of Chicago, was buried under several feet of muddy clay and it was several minutes before fellow workmen dug him out. He was carried groaning to a waiting ambulance and rushed to St. Rita's hospital. He is suffering from a fractured leg and a number of ribs are broken. Internal injuries are feared.

Tony Oleio and Raphael Banno of Lima, were partially covered but were only slightly injured. Oleio suffered a wrenched leg and Banno's arm was injured.

A half dozen men were working in the excavation when, without warning, tons of heavy clay caved in upon them. Recent rain is blamed for the slide.

The work is being done for the city by the Farley Construction Co., of Chicago.

DELINQUENTS FILE

Uncle Sam Compromises on Income Tax Returns

Delinquents who failed to pay their first installment of 1920 income tax by March 15, are now showing up at the office of Deputy Internal Revenue Collector S. P. Herr. A hundred have filed returns in the past month.

Under the law a fine of $1,000 should be assessed besides a penalty of 25 per cent of the tax but Uncle Sam is taking $5 as an offer in compromise from the delinquents.

Every single man who earned $1,000 and very married man with an income of $2,000 or over has to make a return whether or not exemptions free him from tax. Some are forced to pay the $5 offer in compromise who did not have to pay tax.

Just negligence is the reason given for the delay on the part of most of the delinquents while others say they misconstrued the law.

JAPS WITHDRAW

Troops Assigned to Former German Islands Recalled

TOKIO.—(By United Press.)—Japan will withdraw troops from the former German islands assigned to her, the Japanese foreign office announced today.

The statement denied Japan is fortifying the islands, which it described as "economically strategically unimportant."

"It might as well be said," the statement read, "that America controls the Atlantic thru purchase of the Virgin Islands, so to say that Japan by occupying the mandate islands, has staked out on area of 4,000,000 square miles from Kamchatka to the southern Pacific."

NEW IMMIGRATION BILL WILL BE INTRODUCED

WASHINGTON.—Chairman Johnson of the house immigration committee today announced after conference with President Harding that immigration bill, patterned after the measure passed by congress last session but disapproved by President Wilson, would be introduced early in the coming session. He indicated that house leaders would abandon their original plan of practically prohibiting immigration for a year and support the senate proposal limiting the influx of aliens from any European country annually to three per cent of the number of nationals from that country in the United States in 1910.

TURKS IN FLIGHT

Big Success Scored by Greek Forces, Reports Show

ATHENS — (By Associated Press) — Afium-Karahisar, an important railway junction south of Eski-Shehr, has been taken by Greek forces from the Turkish Nationalists, says a Smyrna dispatch to the newspaper. News of this success and large quantities of war materials have been captured, the dispatch declares, and the Turks are fleeing toward Kutayah, about 50 miles northward.

An official statement giving details of Saturday's fighting says that the army east of Smyrna occupied a line running thru the villages of Chesne, Chahabal and Belmachmad and pursued the Turks to Afium-Karahisar, where the attack halted for the night. It is said the Greek losses have been insignificant.

The Greeks east of Bursa have advanced as far as the line drawn thru the villages of Bazarjik, Kuntik, Guezli, Cretes, north of Sugut. These towns are northwest of Eski-Shehr, and the statement seems to indicate that the Turks are enmeshing themselves before this important city.

LEADING AUTHORITIES NOW SHOW JUST WHAT TANLAC REALLY IS

Physiological Action of Principal Ingredients of Celebrated Medicine On the Human System Is Explained

SUPREMACY CLAIMS WELL SUPPORTED

Many of the Medicinal Elements Have Been Known and Used Since Civilization First Began

Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results through this country and Canada, is composed of the most beneficial roots and herbs known to science. The formula is purely ethical and complies with all National and State Pure Food and Drug Laws. Altogether, there are ten ingredients in Tanlac, each of which is of recognized therapeutic value.

Many of these ingredients have been individually known and used since civilization first began, and some of them have been used and prescribed by leading physicians everywhere, but until they were brought together in proper proportion and association, as in the Tanlac formula, humanity had not heretofore realized their full value and effect.

In referring to one of the more important ingredients of Tanlac, the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It has been the source of the most valuable tonic medicines that have ever been discovered." In referring to others of the general tonic drugs contained in Tanlac, the 13th Edition of Potter's Therapeutics, a standard medical text book, states that "They impart general tone and strength to the entire system, including all organs and tissues."

This same well-known authority, in describing the physiological action of still another of the ingredients of Tanlac, which is of value in treating what is commonly known as a run-down condition, "uses the following expression: "It is highly esteemed in loss of appetite during convalescence from acute diseases." There are certain other elements in Tanlac which, because of their influence upon the appetite, digestion, assimilation and elimination, improve the nutrition and vital activity of the tissues and more important organs of the body, and produce that state of general tonicity which is called Health.

The United States Dispensary makes the following comment regarding another ingredient: "It may be used in all cases of pure debility of the digestive organs or where a general tonic impression is required. Dyspepsia, atonic gout, hysteria and intermittent fever are among the many affections in which it has proven useful."

There are certain other ingredients described in the Dispensary and in other standard medical text books as having a beneficial action upon the organs of secretion, whose proper functioning results in the purification of the blood streams passing thru them. In this manner objectionable and poisonous ingredients of the blood are removed and the entire system invigorated and vitalized.

Tanlac was designed primarily for the correction of disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. At the same time, however, it is a powerful reconstructive tonic and body builder, for it naturally follows that any medicine that brings about proper assimilation of the food and a thorough elimination of the waste products must therefore, have a far-reaching and most beneficial effect upon the entire system.

Altho Tanlac's claims for supremacy are abundantly supported by the world's leading authorities, it is the people themselves who have truly made Tanlac what it is. Millions upon millions have used it with gratifying results, and have told others millions what it has done for them. That is why Tanlac has become the real sensation of the drug trade in this country and Canada, and that is also why it is having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world today.—Ad.

WAPAKONETA — (Special) — Forty-eight persons in Wapakoneta, Lima, St. Marys and other nearby cities were heard by John I. Miller, state superintendent of public works, on application to have rents reduced on cottages at Russell Point. A. B. Jones, leasee of seven acres of land from the state and who sublets it to cottagers, is charged with attempting to increase ground rents from $10 to $50 per season. MANY SEEK HOME IN AMERICA

English Held Back, However, by Low Wages, Report

WASHINGTON.—(By Associated Press).—Great numbers of the laboring classes of both England and France want to emigrate to the United States, but are finding it impossible to do so thru inability to save enough money and also because of the adverse monetary exchange. This condition was reported to the secretary of labor today by Rowland B. Mahany, who was sent to Europe by the Wilson administration to attend the sessions of the International Commission on Immigration and Emigration and whose resignation was accepted last week by President Harding.

Low wages are preventing many Englishmen from coming to this country, the report said, while in France the present rate of exchange on the franc is an almost insurmountable barrier to immigration. There was said to be a noticeable note of expectancy in England for better times but rather a lack of optimism among the poorer classes of France. The laboring classes were said to be getting plenty of wholesome food.

'FREEZE-UP' NEAR

Cold Wave on the Way, Weather
Forecaster Says

WASHINGTON.—(By Associated Press).—High temperatures still prevailed early today in eastern states, but a cold wave was marching swiftly eastward from the Great Lakes region, due to strike the Atlantic seaboard tomorrow, the weather bureau said. The lake region and Mississippi valley was in the grip of a "severe freeze," the bureau said, and temperatures in New England and middle Atlantic states will start down tonight after rains late in the day. Local rains and cooler weather in South Atlantic states was forecast, with the cold wave reaching the Gulf states Tuesday.

Warnings of the cold wave have been ordered up for New England, the middle Atlantic region, the western portion of the Carolinas, the Gulf states, eastern Tennessee and West Virginia.

BUSINESS REVIVAL SEEN IN LIMA

Orders Warrant Increase in Working Forces Here.

BIG BOOM EXPECTED SOON

Manufacturers Optimistic—General Outlook Good.

That Lima is on the road to improvement, industrially, is shown by the activity found in the various local factories during the last week. Practically all lines of business are affected, some of course, more than others. This is not merely a local movement but is rather a reflection of the increased optimism being felt in other parts of the country. The east, which was the first section of the country to feel the depression, is now beginning to teem with activity. Sales of automobiles made in New York are running from 200 to 300 per cent higher than at time period last year.

This activity in the motor trades is reflected in the local motor and motor accessory plants.

ORDERS ARE RECEIVED.
The Gramm-Bernstein Truck Co., is receiving orders for their new speed truck in such number as to warrant an increase in their working force. An order was received Saturday morning from a South American firm and others, from all parts of the country, are being received daily. One of the new trucks will be used by a Marion transfer company to haul President Harding's personal effects to Washington.

B. A. Gramm stated Monday that it was expected that the plant would be operating on a full time basis by April.

With the increased production in the motor industries, The Lima Sheet Metal Products Co., is running on a full time basis. Orders were received last week from the General Motors Truck Co., and from the Armleder Co. of Cincinnati. The Gramm-Bernstein also placed an order for various sheet metal accessories. Many orders which have been held up awaiting an upturn in business are now being received, according to officials of the company. These orders together with the business brought them by their new Ford battery boxes has enabled them to take on additional workmen.

INCREASING FORCE.
Very favorable increases in the number of orders being received by the Garford Motor Truck Co., has caused this plant to increase its working force. Business conditions in the future are becoming brighter every day, it is said. It is believed that the worst has been seen and from now on a steady improvement will be shown.

Another plant that is working full time is The East Iron and Machine Co. "New road work being planned shows promise of being greater than any time in the last five years," said C. C. Mosher, vice president of the company. "Road work which has been neglected in the past because of the high costs will now be completed." Orders for three new asphalt plants have been received within the last 30 days and enough orders for repair parts have come in to warrant a full force of men.

At the Lima Locomotive plant the future is entirely dependent on the settlement reached by the railroads. The railroads need equipment but are holding off orders until the conditions are such that it will be possible for them to pay current expenses and also have funds available for the purchasing of needed supplies.

LORAIN POLICE CHIEF
ORDERED REINSTATED

LORAIN — A. A. King, chief of the Lorain police department, who was suspended by Mayor W. F. Grall, was ordered reinstated today by Common Pleas Judge E. B. Thompson, to whom King appealed after the Lorain civil service commission had sustained the mayor and had demoted King to the rank of patrolman.

Grall filed sixteen charges against King, charging failure to perform duty, partiality in assigning officers and with appropriating money taken in gambling raids to his own use. The court held for King in all of the charges made by the mayor.

OIL FILLS WELL OF 1,000 FEET

Predicted Boom in Delphos
Vicinity Materializes

ROAD DAY BODY IS NAMED

Community Chief Prepares to Back Movement

DELPHOS — (Special) — The oil boom predicted by oil experts who operated in this vicinity lately, has materialized. The Hudson Oil Co., of Parkersburg, W. Va., shot a well on the Charles Timbers farm near here, which immediately filled oil to a depth of 1,000 feet. The company holds leases on 2,400 acres near here and further drilling will be undertaken soon. Many other companies are drilling here with favorable results.

A committee from the Delphos Community Club will co-operate with the Allen-co Good Roads Day movement. The appointment of a committee was authorized at a meeting of the officers and board of directors of the organization. The following committee has been appointed by President Alex J. Shenk: John G. Miller, chairman; Clarence Leitch, Carl Lindeman, Mark Beckman, J. H. Lange, John H. Jenkins, Frank S. Scherger.

Manager Otto Aue of the Diesel-Wamner Cigar factory here denies all reports which were circulating here lately to the effect that the plant is to be shut down soon, or that a part of the force will be laid off. He states that at present there are 268 men and women employed by the company, and that, although there is no prospect of further help being employed because of the fact the company is changing from the manufacture of El Veros to San Felice, none of the present force will be dropped.

J. J. Sterick died here Saturday at the home of his sister, Mrs. P. B. Patton, after a long illness from Bright's disease. He was nearing his 54th year.

A movement was begun, and the appointment of a committee authorized by the board of directors of the Community Club for the organization of a park association for the city of Delphos. This movement involves chiefly the beautifying of Recreation Park here.

James Erick a pioneer resident of this city, died at his home Saturday after a three months' illness from asthma and paralysis. He was 72 years of age.

Two addresses by the Hon. C. H. Freeman, member of the Ohio General Assembly, and professor of English at Ohio Northern University, formed the main part of a program at the city teachers' institute held at the Jefferson building here Friday.

KIDDIES CAPTURE HARDING'S YARD

White House Lawn Scene of Great Easter Egg Rolling

WASHINGTON.—(By Associated Press).—The youngsters of Washington took possession of the White House lawns today for the first Easter egg rolling since 1917. All the kids of the city were free to come and go at will in President Harding's back yard for the whole day and they poured down every street and by every car line, each armed with a basket of colored eggs, to deluge the great sweep of lawn in a flood tide of laughing, shouting and crowing childhood.

Kids of every age and color apparently seized the opportunity. It was their day and long before the big iron gates swung back to admit them and the president's own band, the Marine band, tuned up to help things along for the president's guests, there was noise and excitement around each entrance.

Kids came by coaster, in automobiles, strollers, in perambulators, riding in their parents' arms and by every other means of locomotion. The grownups were not invited. They could get by the guards only as humble attendants of the youngsters, but there were thousands during the day who lined the fence and looked smilingly over at the rioting groups on the big lawns.

ALL THE MONEY YOU HAVE CANNOT BUY TWO WORDS IN THESE COLUMNS

THE COST OF LIVING

THOSE who handle the family finances are finding it much easier nowadays to make both ends meet in the matter of buying food and clothing. Especially have housewives been able to buy their weekly provisions for a much lower sum during the last few months, and now the price of practically all articles is down very perceptibly from the peak.

The extent to which the consumer has profited during the last year was shown in a striking manner Saturday by one Lima merchant by use of a window display. This display showed 100 pounds of sugar and a bushel of potatoes, which cost $37.50 a year ago, on one side and on the other was a wagon load of provisions in addition to the same amount of sugar and potatoes, which could be purchased for the same amount of money today.

Economists calculate that the cost of living has dropped some 40 to 50 per cent, but others, figuring in a different way, show that it has decreased far more.

Experts feel that the bottom has been reached in many commodity prices and that in a number of cases higher prices will prevail in a short time. Especially is this true of the commodities now selling at retail at a lower price than it costs to produce them—and there are a number of basic necessities doing this.

Now is the time to buy anything that is needed or will be needed during the next few months. The saving will help along the nest egg in the saving bank. It is the wise person who "salts" away this saving as well as a regular weekly sum. It will come handy later when opportunity comes knocking at the door in a big way.

WAR PRISONERS

MONTH after month, since the close of the world war, has witnessed the release of thousands of prisoners of war, says the Dayton News. In a general way the cessation of hostilities resulted almost immediately in the release of many who had been captured during various battles. But in some countries, Russia in particular, there were hundreds of thousands of men, mostly Germans, who still languished in war camps, improperly fed and clothed. Many succumbed to inadequate protection. Thru the instrumentality of the League of Nations, and giving popular proof of the ability of the league to function despite the criticism which has been heaped upon it, more than 280,000 war prisoners have been freed from Russian stockades and prisons. Repatriation agents of the league have been very busy for some time with results which are gratifying. The Baltic routes have been choked with returning Germans who are glad of this opportunity to get away with their lives from the vermin-infested camps where Russian soldiery has been on guard. The prisoners in the world war, when the story has been written from an unprejudiced standpoint, some maintain will be found to have had a hard lot of it. Improper attention to the wounded, coupled with inadequate food supplies and terrible environment in the prison camps, caused thousands of deaths. In no previous war were there so many men taken prisoner and every country had its troubles in guarding those thus taken. And the food shortage is one of the contributing factors.

SETTLING A MOOTED QUESTION.

Dear Roy: There seems to be quite a few pieces written for the papers these days on the question of whether the good old U. S. will accept German bonds for what Belgium owes us. Here's a way to make them all happy and settle the entire matter: Have the German bonds issued to us for the debts of the allies; this will please all the pro-ally Americans. Then have us make a bon-fire of the bonds, to please the pro-German Americans. After that every man who went across seas should be assessed a year's wages as a penalty for winning the war. This assessment should be poured into the coffers of the profiteers and the New York landlords, neither of whom seem to get enough coin, no matter how they grab it. I also suggest that at least a billion dollars' worth of Liberty bonds be turned over to each column in the release of the thousands who have gone home. It has been physically impossible to extend enough rationing to the prisoners or provide for them in any way. Release has been cheaper than retaining them under guard.

JAPAN'S POSITION

SO great has become the anxiety on the part of many nations concerning Japan and to such an extent has doubt and prejudice grown that 300 prominent citizens of Tokio have banded together to attempt to purchase the good will of the world for their country.

A feeling of insecurity about this nation has sprung up in other lands which has worked a great hardship upon the progressive element of the country. The 300 citizens propose to take the matter of true publicity concerning Japan in their own hands and endeavor to let the world know exactly where and for what the nation stands. They hope to wipe out the misunderstandings and bring about a more friendly feeling thruout the world.

The men at the head of the movement are prompted by patriotism and it may be expected that they will accomplish much. It appears to be the only way in which doubt of the yellow man can be eradicated and then only by truthful statements and not by propaganda intended to "pull the wool" over the eyes of the other nations.

OUR STREET FOREST

SERVICE DIRECTOR McCLAIN has announced that he will recommend that action be taken to have the forest of poles in the downtown business district removed from the streets as soon as possible. The plan of action has not been mapped out, much depending on the action of council, but the decision is good.

Lima is one of the few Ohio cities with streets cluttered up with utility poles. Many smaller cities in this section of the state have solved the problem satisfactorily and have improved their appearance to a great extent as well as removed a permanent menace.

It is only a question of time until the utilities which own the poles will require greater facilities than the poles afford and will be forced to resort to more modern means—underground systems. Lima is growing and it is not to be expected that the pole nuisance will be permitted to increase as the city expands. Now is the time to start on the removal of one of the worst eyesores we have.

CLEAN UP THE CITY

EASTER has come and gone and with its passing, came a skit of snow. That does not mean, however, that the balmy days of Spring are far distant. It is merely an indication of the fickleness of March.

Spring is here. We may have a few cold, dreary days, but the warm sun cannot be hidden long. Now is the time to start the clean-up campaign in Lima. It is the duty of every resident to assist in making the old town a bit brighter. This may be done by clearing out the alleys, "sprucing" up the lawns and a liberal use of the paint brush.

MISS LIMA: It is pretty safe to opine that when the enemies of compensation insurance finish the job of killing it, its friends who were inveigled into helping do it will wake up.

TODAY'S HEALTH HINTS

By William Brady, M. D.
AUTOBOYOGRAHY—1
SANITARIANS DELIGHT

In Chapter 25 of "The Autobiography of a Baby" the author suggests that a certain group of respiratory infections known as the eruptive fevers and shamefully referred to as "children's diseases" or "the diseases of childhood"—as the children were entitled to have them—be rechristened "Sanitarians' Delight." Is not most of the expense of health boards devoted to the work of "controlling" chicken-pox, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough and the like? And does the labor of "controlling" these very diseases which our health authorities so loudly assure us are "preventable" ever grow less? Have the sanitarians any definite plan of procedure they can or will follow in the effort to make good their claims that these diseases can be prevented?

A child who escapes any or all of these infections is unquestionably fortunate, for so lax are the laws or regulations of "quarantine" or isolation and so seldom are such regulations strictly enforced, that fifty years of sanitary "control" finds us just about where we started so far as a child's safety against these diseases is concerned. Out of a thousand children selected at random today, it will be found that no more escape measles and the other health-destroying or sometimes life-destroying respiratory infections up to the age of seven than escaped fifty years ago.

There is a very clear explanation for the failure of public health measures to prevent these disastrous diseases among children. The difficulty lies in wilful ignorance by public health officers of the overwhelming

YOUR NAME

By PHILIP FRANCES NOWLAN
RACIAL ORIGIN—English.
SOURCE—An occupation.
HERE is a name which deserves mention perhaps, not because it is so widespread as because it is widely known as a result of the notoriety achieved several years ago by a member of the medical profession of his peculiar suggestions for the use of chloroform.

The family name of Oster appears to have taken its origin from an occupation; that of "oster," which, however, held quite a different position of importance in the middle ages from that which is accorded to it now.

It comes, in fact, from the same word that "host" does. The medieval "hosteller" was one whose special office was the care of the only means of land transportation known to the populations of those days, and the "hosteller" got its name from the fact that it was a horse station more than from any connection with supplying the bodily comforts of man. The innkeeper was not known as a "host" or a "hosteller" at first, but as a "herberjour." Gradually, thru the joining of the two services, to horse and man, in the same establishment, the name "host" was applied to the proprietor of the two, which is good evidence that in those days the service of the horses was considered more important by the travelers than that accorded to themselves.

Your old methods of teeth cleaning

See what this new way does. Watch your teeth whiten—note how clean they feel. Millions have learned in this way how much film removal means. It is something that you should know.

You must fight film

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. It clings to the teeth unless you combat it, gets between the teeth and stays.

It forms a dingy coat which dims the luster of the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus, most tooth troubles are now traced to film! And, despite the daily brushing, very few escape them. The old brushing methods do not effectively fight film.

New ways to combat it

Dental science has now found ways to combat film. The methods are embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. It has proved so effective that leading dentists everywhere are now advising it. And millions of people have already adopted it.

Pepsodent, with every use, brings five desired effects. It attacks the film in two efficient ways. It keeps teeth highly polished. It stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That to digest the starch deposits which cling to the teeth and often form acid. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Modern authorities regard these effects as essential aids to Nature, in view of the average diet. To bring those effects twice daily means such protection as you have not known before.

See and feel them

The results can be seen and felt. They are delightful, and this 10-day test will bring them 20 times.

Send the coupon for it. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects, and the book we send you will tell you what they mean.

Do this now in justice to yourself. Learn how much this new-day method means to you and yours.

JUST FOLKS—BY EDGAR A. GUEST

EASTER

They found the great stone rolled away
And him whom men had crucified,
With cruel spears had pierced his side
And mocked with jests and jibes that day,
Gone from the darkness and the gloom
Of Death's grim tomb.
Where he had slept in Death's embrace
The linen of his shroud was piled,
And white-robed angels gently smiled
And bade them walk into the place.
"The Lord is risen!" to them they said,
"He is not dead."
Keep ye the faith and still be brave!
From every tomb that Easter day
The Stone of death was rolled away.
The soul lives on beyond the grave,
Death is but rest from pain and strife—
The gate to life!

WHAT THE STARS PREDICT

This is an uncertain day.
Under this rule of the stars those who are ambitious should reach their goal without difficulty.
This is not a favorable time for making contracts or pacts.
This is not a lucky day for love affairs, particularly for the beginning of romances.
Persons whose birthday this is may expect a prosperous year, though changes depending on travel may not turn out as expected.
Children born on this day should be trained to be thrifty, and will probably succeed best as employees.

A simple yet impressive wedding ceremony was solemnized at the First Baptist church at 6 o'clock Easter morning just preceding the Sunrise Prayer service when Miss Doris Young, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Young was united in marriage to Otto V. McMillen, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. McMillen, the Rev. Carpenter officiating. Miss Serelda Wood, as maid of honor and Merle Furman as best man were the only attendants. The immediate families together with Mrs. Amelia Schiwe and Mr. and Mrs. Glen Webb were present for the ceremony. The bride was happily surprised when a group of her very intimate friends including Miss Annette Roby, Miss Margaret Menaffey, Miss Elsie Cunningham, Miss Edith Laughlin, Miss Jeanette Stelzenbach, Miss Elizabeth Brennan, Miss Ruth Wells, Miss Abigail Sullivan, Miss Charlotte Sieber, and Miss Frieda Pascoe gathered at the church to attend the ceremony.

The attractive bride was very lovely in a beautiful blue tulle gown and her carriage was composed of pink roses and sweet peas. The maid of honor was crowned in a handsome midnight blue tulle suit, her carriage being of violets and sweet peas.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the Young home, S. Metcalf-st. where an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. The dining room was prettily decorated with Easter suggestions. Centering the dining room table was a large basket tied with a bow of pink tulle, containing dainty spring blossoms. Suspended from the basket were white satin streamers which were tied to crystal candle holders each containing a pink candle placed at each corner.

The bride is one of Lima's most attractive and popular young girls. She was graduated from the Lima Central High School in the Class of 1919 and afterwards attended Dennison University, Greenville and Miami University, Oxford. Complimenting Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Daymon, Cleveland, and Miss Betty Daymon, Findlay, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Daymon entertained at an informal evening of cards at their home Saturday. At a late hour the hostess served light refreshments.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Perry Roeder, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Glover, Miss Rose Elizabeth Blair, Miss Mary Margaret Blair and the host and hostess. All met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Edward Humbert, Holmes-ave.

The rooms were very attractive with decorations of purple and white throat. Those in charge of the dance were William Snyder, chairman, Douglas Andrews and Harry Strasburg.

KEEP BLOOD IN FIGHTING TRIM
Thin-Blooded People Should Strengthen the Blood With a Good Tonic to Keep Off Contagious Disease

TAKE GUD'S PEPTO-MANGAN
If You Tire Easily and Feel Run Down, Your Blood Needs More Red Corpuscles. Watch Your Blood Condition Now

It is thin-blooded, anemic people that disease strikes first. If any of the disease germs that so often become epidemic catch you in a run-down condition, they are able to take hold—and the first thing you know you are ill. But if you are in good condition, your blood vigorous, rich and red, your system is able to throw off the effects of germs that are so prevalent when an epidemic breaks out.

Make up your mind to this fact—you are either well or you are "not well." And the common-sense thing to do is to be on the safe side. If you are in doubt, take that wonderful blood tonic, Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It makes blood rich and red. It increases the number of red corpuscles, and your system is better able to fight the ravages of epidemics.

Watch your children. If they are pale and wan and thin blooded, give them Gude's Pepto-Mangan. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is put up in both liquid and tablet form and is sold by druggists everywhere. The liquid and tablets have exactly the same medicinal value. Buy whichever you prefer, and be sure it is genuine "Gude's Pepto-Mangan." The name "Gude's" is on the package.—Adv.

GIRL IS FICKLE

(By BUBBIE SMART.)

Dear Miss Smart:
I am engaged to a young man and very much in love with him. Not long ago I met another young man whom I have learned to like very much. He proposed to me saying he would always be good to me and would buy me a lovely home and beautiful clothes. What do you think I should do?

Are you really ashamed to be so fickle? If you were truly in love with the man to whom you are engaged you would not be influenced by the other man's offer of a fine home and clothes. You would be content to live in a very modest home with him and be happy sharing what he could give you. It is only true love. Do not think that all a man can do is to make his wife happy. She also must play her part and be willing to do her utmost in making him happy.

I think it would be a great injustice to your fiance if you married him now with this feeling of doubt in your mind. Do not think that you are to wait until you are certain that you love the man you marry for what he is and not by the dazzling promises of which he assures you.

Dear Miss Smart:
I am a young man 20 years old and have been keeping company with a girl of 19 for the last six months. Her birthday is next month and would it be proper for me to get her a present? If so would you please suggest something or would a nice bouquet of flowers be alright?

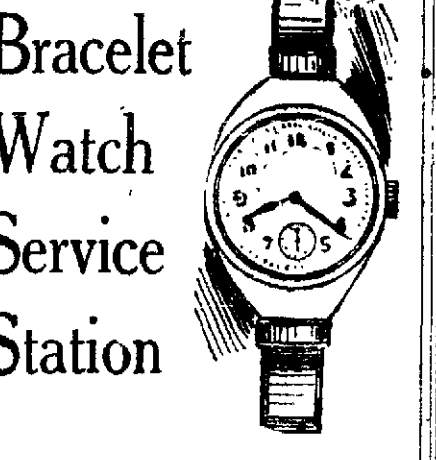

Yes I think it would be very thoughtful of you to give the young lady some little remembrance. The flowers would be very nice, or a box of candy.

KID SCANLAN-By H. C. Witwer

Well, Genaro's afraid to get in with Potts, which according to Harold was a ex-roommate of his, and this guy a crack at everything from directing to cupin, and Harold said, "You're a crack at everything, aren't you?" The only thing he seemed to be any good at was talking about himself, and he was champion of the world at that!

He got up on the south gate one afternoon by a strange scene painter for telling the latter that he could shut both eyes, blind one arm, lay flat on his side and paint a better exterior than the two hundred dollar a week decorator, and he started a riot in the developin' room another time by remarkin' that the bunch there didn't know how to taste in film-addin', of course that he did. The fact that he didn't know no sensation in our midst, worried Harold about as much as the price of electric fans keeps leavin' in the land. There was only one thing Harold was afraid of—and that was Joe.

Then Potts blows in unexpected one afternoon, and we all stood around to see him and Harold fall on each other's neck. Potts comes by, and we all yell, "Welcome to Film City, Mr. Potts!" Harold hears his and turns pale. He seen we was all watchin' closely for the grand reunion between him and the old college chum Potts. He coughs a couple of times and takes a step forward. That boy was came!

"How do you do, Mr. Potts?" he says. "Did you—er—have a pleasant trip?"

"Yes," answers Potts, looking at him kinda puzzled. "What is your name again? I don't seem to recall it."

"Why—er—why—ha! ha!" pipes Harold, dyin' game. "That's odd! Surely you recall—eh—Cuthbert, my name is, you must remember—eh—"

"Potts is lookin' him over like he's a strange fish or somethin'!" pipes the boss, cuttin' in on Harold. "I never saw you before in my life!"

"With that he passes on, leavin' Harold flat and with no more friends than China had at the peace conference."

I made a mistake when I said everybody rode him—had three visitors, the Kid, and Miss Vincent. Miss Vincent claimed that after all he was only a boy which would grow out of him, if given enough time, it was an outrage the way everybody picked on him. The Kid said we couldn't all be perfect, and Miss Vincent would be him back his presents if he laid off Harold. My excuse for not shootin' Harold was that I liked one thing about him, and that was the way he hung on, no matter how they was breakin' for him.

Van Aylstine, the guy that committed the scenarios, was one night to get some atmosphere for a thriller at Montana Joe's. He got the atmosphere O. K., bringin' most of it back on his breath and the Kid asked him to stick out his tongue and he could see was they any rears stamps on it. In the mornin' he grabbed a container of ice water, and a pen and dashed off a atrocious in five reels based on what atmosphere of Montana Joe's that was still with him. He called the thing "The End of the World!" De Vronde, the popular heartbreaker, is given the lead opposite Miss Vincent, and, of course, Kid Scanlan is to be dragged in as a special feature. Harold has hypnotized Genaro into lettin' him take off a "enter with others" in the first reel. Everything was ready to have the cameras pointed at it, when "somethin'" come along that bailed it all up.

His name was Gladys O'Hara. Gladys was no ravin' beauty and I heard her say "ain't it?" twice, but she was one of them dames that the first flash you get at 'em you wonder are they still enforcin' the law against muzzlers!

When J. Harold Cuthbert met Gladys, she had got as far as bein' a saleslady in the Busy, Bee, Frisco. I was standin' in the next aisle to where Gladys held forth, one afternoon, waitin' for a couple of fat heads to call it a day and move away from the counter, when along comes Harold.

Well, Harold gets warmed up and in a minute he's press agentin' himself at the rate of fifty-five words a minute, clocked him. He tells Gladys he's bein' starred in "The End of the World" and the amount of money they're payin' him would startle Europe, if it ever got out. When Harold put on the brakes and eased up, she threw him a look that I would have walloped Dempsey for. Harold says he must go, because the picture would be ruined if he went in there to direct it, and Gladys held out a tremblin' hand.

The next mornin' they begin work on the first reel of "The End of the World," and Harold had a field day at bein' rotten. He got in every body's way, ruined twenty feet of film, firin' off a cannon at the machine and made Genaro hysterical by gettin' caught in a paper mache tower and pullin' it down. Not content with that, eh goes back of a interior to try out one of the Kid's cigarettes and by simply flickin' the thing into a can of kerosene he sets the Mandlin Movin' Picture Company back about five hundred bucks.

They run him out of the picture, and he went yellin' that it would be a farce without him in it.

About four o'clock me and the Kid is trottin' along the road outside of Film City like we did every day so Scanlan could keep in condition. When we all fell over Harold, he's sittin' on a rock and gasin' off very sad in the general direction of New York. He looked like a guy that has worked twenty-seven years inventin' a new steamboat and then seen it sink the first time he tried it out.

"Alas!" he remarks, strikin' a match on my shoe. "Alas!"

"When can the body be seen?" asks Scanlan. "And is it a church funeral or will they pull it off at the house?"

"This is no time for levity," mutters Harold. "I'm ruined!"

"Go on!" encourages the Kid. "I'm all worked up—shoot it!"

"Well, then," says Harold, with the air of a guy pleadin' guilty to save his hide. "In the first place my name is not J. Harold Cuthbert!"

There was no answer from us, and Harold seemed peeved because we had not collapsed at his confession. "What is it?" I ask, when the silence begin to hurt the ears.

"Trot!" pipes Harold, bitterly. "Joe Trout!"

"Yeh?" says the Kid. "Well, what's the matter with that? Well, did you can it for?"

"Imagine a moving picture leadin' man named Trout!" he goes on. "I changed my name as a sacrifice to the movies, for—"

"Just a minute!" I butt in. "On the level now, where did you get your movin' picture experience?"

"An assistant bookkeeper in a grocery store!" he answers. "Now you have it!"

"But you said your father was a big man in Wall Street!" I busts out.

"He is!" answers Harold, lookin' over at the Santa Fe. "They don't come any bigger. He's a traffic policeman at the corner of Broadway and Wall street and stands six foot four in his socks."

Then he asks us do we want to hear the rest.

"If you don't tell it," says the Kid, "you'll never leave here alive. Hurry up, I'm dyin' to hear it!"

"Well," says the ex-J. Harold Cuthbert, "I am about to be married and at the eleventh hour Nemesis has gripped me. I told my fiancée that I was being featured in 'The End of the World' and that I would be exceedingly easy for me to get her a part in the picture—she having expressed a desire to that effect at various times. She will be here within the hour to watch me being filmed, and to hold me to my promise to place her as a leading woman opposite me."

There was a heavy silence for a minute, and then the Kid whistles. "Well, pal," he says, "you have certainly belied things up a few, haven't you?"

Joe Trout just let loose another moan.

"I love her!" he says. That was all—but the way he pulled it was a plenty!

The Kid grants and tosses the pill. The he walks over to Joe, and slaps him on the back.

"Listen!" he says. "You ain't a bad guy at that. I'm gonna give you somethin' I never took in my life—advice. Why don't you lay off lyin' about yourself, kid? Why don't you can that four-flush thing?"

"Because!" he shoots out thru his teeth. "Because I can't!"

Right then and there I warmed up to Joe Trout like I never had before. After all, Miss Vincent had the right dope—he was nothin' but a big kid at that, and any guy that will come right out in public and admit he's a false alarm, deserves credit!

"Listen!" interrupts the Kid. "I got the whole thing doped out. When is this dame of yours due to hit Film City?"

"She'll be here on that one o'clock train," means Joe.

"First!" says the Kid. "Now get this! De Vronde is supposed to do a fall from a horse in 'The End of the World' and the big yellow bum won't do it. They're lookin' for some guy that will take his place, just for that one flash, see. Now suppose I fix it so you get that chance, and when the dame comes on, there you are playin' the lead as far as she can see, in the best part of the frolic. How's that?"

"I'll never forget it!" he boaters. "You have saved my life! What can I do to repay you?"

"Stop four-flushin'," comes back the Kid, "and be on the level!"

"I'll do it, if it kills me!" promises Joe—and I don't know whether he meant the fall or the other.

"Can you ride a horse?" the Kid asks him as we start back.

"Can I ride a horse?" repeated Joe, stoppin' short. "What a question! What at home I was the champion—"

"Now, now!" butts in the Kid. "There you go again!"

"Pardon me!" says Joe, gettin' red—and he quits!

Well, the Kid fixed it all right, so's Joe could double for De Vronde in that one place where he would fall. About half a hour later, Genaro asks me to go over and find Potts, because they're ready to start shootin' the picture and when I got near the hotel I seen a couple of people blockin' the little narrow passage in back of it. They was Gladys O'Hara and Joe Trout and when I got close up I heard Joseph talkin'.

He explains to Gladys that he went on only in the important part of the picture which she would see in a minute, and that De Vronde was only one of the cheap help who played the part while he was restin' for the big scene.

"—and not only that," he winds up, "but they are going to feature my name on all the advertising for the picture!"

"Is that all?" asks Gladys in a kidded or—quicker little voice.

Joe looked surprised. I guess it was the first time anybody had asked for more!

"Well—not!" he starts off again briskly. "Of course, I am—"

"Wait!" says Gladys, grabbin' his arm. "Don't tell me any more lies! They are not featuring you in this or any other picture! You are not the leading man, you are only a super! Your father is not a millionaire and you cannot get me a job with the Mandlin Moving Picture Company! You're simply a big four-flusher and that lets you out!"

Joe whirls around on her at that, and altho this bird had beat me to the wire with Gladys, I felt sorry for him right then. The poor kid was hangin' on the ropes walkin' for somebody to throw in the sponge.

"If you knew all that," he says, kinda choked, "why—why—'til you let me come over and continue to—mislead you?"

Gladys coughs and places three on four stray hairs exactly back of her little white ear, gasin' at her wrist watch like it's the first time she ever seen one, and she's wonderin' can it really go. The big boob stands there lookin' at her and the chance of a couple of lifetimes is slippin' away.

"Well, why?" demands Joe again. "This stuff is all new to me," says Gladys, with a sigh, "but I guess I've got to do it!"

She gazes at him from the ground and gets kinda red. It was not your conversation that made the hit with me!" she winds up softly.

"I'm afraid I don't understand," pipes Senseless Joe.

"Heavens!" remarks Gladys. "There's enough concrete between your neck and your hat to build a bridge over the bay! I can safely say you're the first man I ever proposed to, but somebody's got to do it and I guess I'm the goat!"

"What!" screams Joe, comin' to life at last. "You—you—forgive—"

"Say!" says Gladys. "Am I bein' kidded or—"

HER OWN CAREER

By PHYLIS CHILLIPS

GWENDA DANCES

The curtain rose slowly on a packed house. The applause had caused the hearts of all behind the scenes to beat with delight. It had been a wonderful, warm reception, with a reception as only New York can give to its artists when it fully appreciates each treasure that they have to offer. Vassili, all smiles and excitement, was busy shouting out some directions to the stagehands, and admonishing his chorus to be ready in time for their next dance, when Gladys, ready for her solo, burst upon his vision.

"Lovely—perfect—beyond words," were his words to her as she appeared. "Now go in and live up to all my expectations of you, my dear," he cautioned her as the bell sounded, and Gwenda, poised and breathless, knew that her hour was at hand.

After that she remembered nothing. All passed like a dream. The dance, the hushed attention of the audience, which she held from start to finish, and then, then, the long, long, soul-stirring applause! Again and again it called for the flushed and delighted girl, and again and again she came out and bowed and blew kisses of gratitude to each and every member of the house. Although she was new to them, they gave her, her full quota of plaudits, and finally she was lifted half fainting from the stage into the wings by Vassili, himself, who was hoarse with joy at her success.

"Come, away with you all to your rooms and let the girl get a rest by herself," he told the chorus as he led Gladys to her dressing room and placed her in a comfortable chair.

"You see I told you the truth, my dear," he said as the door closed upon them, and she, still with her spirit only half in the room, smiled dreamily at him and his words.

"It was all so simple," she gasped. "I felt no fear from the moment that I went on the stage until I came off. And I have been worryin' about things so, for days and days. I am, I have no idea how frightened I was, right up until the time I went on."

"You were born for the dance, Gwenda, no doubt about it; but you were born to be fashioned by me, only. Never forget that. I alone can make your name ring down the halls of fame. I only can see to it that you are properly advertised throughout the world, the world that so rightly belongs to you and your twinkling toes."

"Do it! Do it! Do it! I trust you completely," said the young dancer, dropping her tired head out to her knees for an instant and sitting inert while Vassili went on with his admonitions.

"I hope that everyone who loves me and whom I love saw me this evening," she said suddenly, raising her head, and looking with glowing eyes over at her master. "For it is the most wonderful evening of my whole life."

"It is only the first of many wonderful evenings of your life, Gwenda. Channing, make no mistake about that," Vassili corrected her. "You have the world at your feet."

"You have the world at your feet?" she asked.

"That's right," said Vassili. "You have the world at your feet."

"You have the world at your feet?" she asked.

Another Woman Escapes

Mrs. McCumber Avoided a Serious Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time

Georgetown, Ill.—"After my first baby was born I suffered so with my left side that I could not walk across the floor unless I was all humped over, holding to my side. I doctored with several doctors but found no relief and they said I would have to have an operation. My mother insisted on my taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. Now I can do all my own work and it is the Vegetable Compound that has saved me from an operation. I cannot praise my medicine too highly and I tell all of my friends and neighbors what the Compound did for me."—Mrs. MARGARET McCUMBER, 27 S. Frasier St., Georgetown, Illinois.

Mrs. McCumber is one of the unnumbered thousands of housewives who struggle to keep about their daily tasks, while suffering from ailments peculiar to women with backache, sideaches, headaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness, and if every such woman should profit by her experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would get well.

CARTER & CARROLL

IMPORTANT TO EVERY MOTHER
Do you know the best energy food for children?

GROWING children need a great deal more energy food than adults, for they use up so much more energy. Every mother and father knows this.

The food element that furnishes the greatest amount of energy—is Dextrose. Most of the food you eat—such as bread, starchy vegetables, and all forms of sugar—has to be changed into Dextrose before your system can use it.

Karo, the Great American Syrup, contains a very large percentage of dextrose. This gives Karo its wonderful energy-producing value, and is what makes it so nourishing and wholesome for children—as well as for grown people.

Give the children all the Karo their system needs—on cakes or bread, or for making delicious, pure home-made candy.

Do not be deceived by cans containing syrup that might look like Karo. The name "Karo" is on every can of original Karo—look for it, and be assured of full weight cane and highest quality.

BLUE Karo
The standard table syrup. Also for cooking, baking and candy making. It has brown color, delicious flavor—a heavy-bodied syrup.

RED Karo
The ideal syrup for every use—for cooking, baking, candy making and preserving. Because of its heavy-bodied appearance many prefer it as a spread for cakes, biscuits, breads.

GREEN Karo
Flavored with highest grade real maple sugar. Very moderate in price—excellent for use. The makers of Karo are the world's largest users of the highest grade maple sugar—over 2 thousand tons used annually.

FREE Scientifically Formulated Cane Syrup—Karo—has been used by the U.S. Army, Navy, and Coast Guard.

NEW YORK NATIONALS HIT A HARD BLOW THRU SUDDEN ILLNESS OF GOLDIE RAPP

By HENRY L. FARRELL.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK.—Pittsburgh's chances in the National League will bolt up into the favorite class if fate continues to shoot New York's infield.

By some jinx ruling, it seems ordained that John McGraw can't get a bomb-proof inner wall for his club.

Goldie Rapp broke up what looked to be the makings of the classiest inside defense in the major leagues, when he went down with the flu.

If the former St. Paul star has influenza or pneumonia, McGraw might just as well start the process of elimination among his rookies, if Johnny Evers knows anything about those maladies.

"The flu or pneumonia just about finishes the career of any ball player. It ruined me, and I have watched other cases," the Cub boss said here last winter when he was watching the fight of the late George Gipp.

With due sympathy for the trials and hard luck of another, George Gibson can't view the slow development of the New York and Brooklyn pitcher without some glee.

In the case of three such evenly matched clubs, everything depends on a flying start such as Uncle Wilbert Robinson got last season, but from the form shown by their hurlers, neither McGraw nor Robby is fixed to burn up the circuit from the opener.

Brooklyn came north last spring with the best conditioned team in the major leagues and a staff of pitchers that worked in July form under the chilly April breezes.

McGraw brought a team to the wire wrecked by a long, tiresome barnstorming trip. The club is wrecked this year by the same circus traveling and a lot of injuries.

Pat Moran is doing well so far with what he has but that isn't a lot with Roush, Groh and Kopf still holding out.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh is sliding along smoothly, without raising much dust. Unless Gibby runs into some hard luck, he should start the season with the best-balanced and finest conditioned team in the race, and the start means everything.

INDIANS READY FOR EXPEDITION THRU SOUTHWEST

CLEVELAND.—The world's champion Cleveland Indians are prepared to end training camp activities at Dallas, Texas and start Wednesday on a barnstorming tour. A game is scheduled with the Dallas, Texas League team today, but according to advices received here last night, it was doubtful if the game would be played on account of cold weather.

Manager Speaker announced at a banquet there that barring accidents the Indians would train at Dallas again next Spring.

BROOKLYN DODGERS ARE IN POOR CONDITION

NEW ORLEANS, La.—With a son Two games with the St. Louis club badly out of condition, Brooklyn will engage the National League champions today, and for the last leg of the training season.

INCLEMENT WEATHER PROHIBITS GAME SUNDAY

WICHITA FALLS.—Inclement weather prevented the Sox squad from playing Wichita Falls, here yesterday. The game will be played today.

CUBS TROUNCE VERNON SUNDAY IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—With Alexander on the mound, the Cubs trounced Vernon here yesterday 4 to 1. The regulars play Sacramento at Sacramento tomorrow.

COMISKEY IS PROUD OF HIS SOX

CHICAGO.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, whose championship club was shattered as a result of the baseball scandal, today believes the team has succeeded in rebuilding the team which has been his pride.

The "Old Roman" chief concern is whether Manager Gleason will be able to build up an effective pitching staff from the large number of recruits on hand.

In former years, Comiskey had little difficulty getting first class pitchers, but was unable to land the men who could connect with batters. This year the tables seem to have turned, unless the recruit twirlers make good. He has signed a number of players who had good batting marks last season, and may become sluggers this year.

The leading pitchers with the White Sox, and around whom the staff will be moulded, are Faber, Kerr, Hodge and Wilkinson, the latter two having joined the last year. It is likely that Hodge and Wilkinson will be able to take a regular turn on the mound. Joe Morris, of Tulsa, Okla., Mulrean, purchased from Columbus, Mo., and bought from Milwaukee, probably will round out the staff, although one or two others may be retained.

The infield, which was wrecked last fall, may furnish a big surprise this season. Comiskey obtained three stars from the Salt Lake Club in Ernie Johnson, shortstop; Eddie Mulligan, third baseman and Sholey, first baseman.

If these three players can fit in with Captain Eddie Collins, the guardian of the keystone sack, baseball fans declare the infield should be one of the fastest in the country. The three Salt Lake players have been working together for several years and with the veteran Collins are expected to make a creditable showing.

ERINIE HAS THE STUFF.—Ernie Johnson, who attempted to fill his shoes at short, had a batting average of .229 in the Pacific Coast league last season. He has a strong arm and gets the ball away with great speed and accuracy.

The hole at third base, caused by the loss of "Buck" Weaver, will not be difficult to fill. Two great prospects are in line for the place. Ray Vee McEllen, who played the role of utility with the White Sox, is a natural fielder and is giving Eddie Mulligan, the Salt Lake third sacker, a hard run for the position. Each has a world of speed and it may not be until the season opens that one will be given the regular assignment.

MANY OUTFIELDERS

The club is well stocked with outfielders, despite the fact that Joe Jackson and "Humpy" Lelch are numbered among the missing. Harry Hooper, obtained in a trade from Boston, will become a fixture.

DANCE NOTICE.—Notice Lima Council No. 528. A R. A. will give a Bungalow Aton square dance Wednesday evening. Ladies are requested to wear Bungalow Aprons in pay 25 cents admission. Conits, 50 cents.

Strictly fresh country eggs, 25 cents a dozen at Piper's.

MICHIGAN IS HOPEFUL OF BALL TEAM

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Despite loss of Vernon L. Parks, University of Michigan's star pitcher, who is a probable because he played professional baseball last season, Michigan has hopes of winning the "Big Ten" conference diamond title for the third consecutive time this year.

The 1921 squad appears to be stronger than that of last season in every department except pitching. Ed Ruzicka, a leading conference pitcher of 1920, is relied upon to fill the place held by Parks. O'Hara, another veteran will be available to pitch. Ruzicka.

HOOPER'S PAIR OF ACTS.

In the live ring department Michigan has Henry Viek, football center, who has been first string catcher last year, will go the outfield.

Johnson, Karpus and Uteritz are expected to play regularly at first, second and third bases, respectively, although they have not been definitely decided upon. Peter J. VanBoven is slated for shortstop.

In the outfield Perrin and Geneboth are the only letter men available, with Jack Dunn, varsity quarterback, Stanley Broome of Detroit and Douglas F. Roby contending for the remaining position. Roby is a heavy hitter.

PIVOT IS PILOT.

Destinies of the Meize and Blue this year are in the hands of Derrill Pratt, star second baseman of the New York Americans last year.

Michigan regards Illinois as its only real contender for diamond honors this spring. As Carl Lundgren, who while coach here piloted Michigan to three successive conference championships, has returned to Illinois, the rivalry between the two schools is expected to be keen.

HAVE DOZEN GAMES.

Twelve conference games will be played by Michigan this year, as follows:

April 27—Purdue at Ann Arbor.
May 2—Purdue at Lafayette.
May 7—Chicago at Ann Arbor.
May 14—Iowa at Ann Arbor.
May 16—Ohio State at Columbus.
May 21—Chicago at Chicago.
May 23—Iowa at Iowa City.
May 27—Ohio State at Ann Arbor.
May 28—Illinois at Ann Arbor.
May 30—Wisconsin at Ann Arbor.
June 1—Illinois at Urbana.
June 6—Wisconsin at Madison.

Get a jar at once from the nearest drug store. It is a clean, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister. Brings speed and comfort while it is being rubbed on!

Musterole is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Millions of jars are used annually for bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, colds of the chest. (It often prevents pneumonia.) 35c and 65c jars; hospital size $3.00.

Consistent selling by the Lincoln Life Insurance Company, team of Post Wayne, Ind., last night, gave them a total of 2,926 pins and three place in the five man event, their score falling 25 pins short of tying the Fleming Furniture Company team of Cleveland in second place.

The Lincoln's four team singles of 618, 1015 and 1060 without one of their five getting a 200 average. Their best single score was 216 pins with 144 count at 169 pins.

The tournament leaders are five men: A. H. Arnold and brother, Chicago; two men: Kibusch and Schlemmer, Rochester, individual—Fred Smith, Detroit; all events—A. Schlemmer, Rochester.

BREAD PRICES CUT.—CLEVELAND.—As a result of a price cutting war, bread prices were reduced two cents a loaf here today. The wholesale price to retailers for the pound loaf is seven cents and nine cents for the pound and one half loaf and the retail price 8 and 10 cents respectively.

SLOAN'S GOES RIGHT TO THE ACHING SPOT. You can just tell by its healthy, stimulating odor, that it is going to do you good.

THOUSANDS of men and women, when the least little rheumatic "crick" assails them, have Sloan's Liniment handy to knock it out. Popular over a third of a century ago—far more popular today.

That's because it is so wonderfully helpful in relieving external aches and pains—catarrhs, lumbago, backache, neuralgia, overstrained muscles, stiff joints, weather exposure results. A little is all that is necessary, for it soon penetrates without rubbing, to the sore spot. No muck, no stained skin.

All druggists—3c, 70c, $1.40.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS HOPEFUL OF WINNING LEAGUE PENNANT

By SID KEENER.

(Sport Editor St. Louis Times.)

(Written for the United Press.)

ST. LOUIS.—Discovery of probably a phenom for second base in Bill Gleason and the prospect of a tight pitching staff makes the Browns a formidable candidate for this year's American League pennant.

When Lee Fohl started his spring train at the Bogalusa camp he sighed when he looked in the direction of second base where the shoes of Joe Geddon yawned. There were three possible candidates—Gleason, a midget on the build of Eddie Foster from the Chattanooga club; Dudley Lee, another Lilliputian from the Mobile club and Marty McManus, a former Chicago semi-professional from Tulsa. Gleason in two weeks convinced Fohl that he is capable of holding down the sack.

With second base apparently covered in major league style, the question with the Browns turns to pitching. If the pitching holds up and it has a chance of becoming the strongest staff in the league, Fohl believes he will be more than a dark horse in this year's pennant race.

EIGHT FOR INFIELD.—The infield shows Sisler, Gleason, Gerber and Earl Smith, with Jimmy Austin, Lee and McManus as substitutes. These two youngsters will be retained. The outfield has Williams, Jacobson and Tobin, holdovers from last year, with Phil Todd, a St. Louis amateur, in line for the extra place, owing to his hitting. Todd joined the Browns as a pitcher, but is being turned into a fielder.

Two young catchers—John Heyking and Dennett Tate, are due for experience in the minors, leaving Severed, Billings, and Collins to take care of the receiving.

HAVE 16 PITCHERS.—The roster shows 16 pitchers, which means that at least five will pass out of sight. As the staff sizes B. of B. T. No 539.

KLESCH TO FIGHT BOB MOHA.—COLUMBUS.—Bob Moha, of Milwaukee, and Johnny Klesch, of Cleveland, middleweight boxers, meet here tonight as the headline attraction of a four contest card. They will box 12 rounds. For good Meats call Piper's.

ARE TERRIFIC HITTERS.—Another terrific hitting club—last year they topped the league with a record average of .308 and the prospect of an improved pitching staff. Weak in left handed pitching last year the club apparently has picked up two regulars in Culllop and Palmero. They are not youngsters as both have had major league experience.

Fohl has refused to pick a position for the Browns and his slogan is: "Let the critics and the fans do the picking and we will try to hit the mark."

ALLEN-CO IS INTERESTED IN PROBE AT OHIO PEN

Allen-co is much interested in the probe which has been going on at the Ohio state penitentiary, of which
P. E. Thomas, former Allen-co resident, is warden. Thomas blames politicians.
State Auditor Tracy said Saturday that Marion Hoopengartner of his department, examiner of state institutions, for the last six years, has been conducting an investigation at the penitentiary.
"His report has not been completed and consequently no conclusions have been arrived at," Tracy said.
Warden Thomas said he knew of at least three things that were under investigation. They are: Alleged political activity on his part, alleged printing of Democratic political literature on penitentiary presses and alleged repair of "outside" autos in the penitentiary garage.
"As far as I am concerned," Thomas said, "I court the fullest investigation. A thorough investigation will disclose that no political literature of any kind was printed at the penitentiary."
Warden Thomas is a native of Monroe, La. Up to the time he entered the employ of the Mansfield reformatory as field officer, he spent much of his time in Allen-co.
His parents resided north of West
Cairo on a farm.

MANY WITNESSES CALLED TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE
ALLEN-CO GRAND JURY

More than 10 cases, including persons bound over from justice courts in Lima and Allen-co, as well as from police court in Lima, will be investigated by the grand jury.
The grand jury, which started its work Monday morning.
A number of the cases to be considered will be those of dependent wives abandoned by their husbands and left with children to support and parents who have been totally forgetful and neglectful of their aged parents.
Among the 100 prisoners up for consideration are those of that of W. M. Bowsher charged with stealing an automobile from Harrod and Son, Albert L. Lister, former patrolman, charged with grand larceny, Moxie
Elmer charged with attack on William O'Connor, Clyde Harper for alleged pocket picking of W. O.
Pence in the Manhattan hotel.
Twenty-four witnesses were called to testify Monday and 24 have been summoned to give testimony Tuesday. The session may extend into Wednesday.

SOUNDS WARNING
TO ALL MECHANICS

C. E. FERGUSON

When a mechanic's system goes on a "strike" it is a well-known fact that he gets his "knocks." The carpenter feels "bored," the plumber has "stiff joints," the mason thinks he has a "brick" in his stomach, a stove man declares his intestines are
"on fire," an engineer loses "steam," and a conductor dislikes his daily
"fare."
In hundreds of homes right here in the city of Lima all mechanics and mechanics' wives who praise
Ferguson because Ferguson has broken their physical sickness.
Ferguson is composed of roots and barks, well known for their tonic, digestive and appetizing properties.
Sick headaches, nervousness, sleeplessness, dizzy spells, yellow complexion, underweight and other symptoms are frequently due to feeble and slow digestion or to habitual constipation. When such is the case Ferguson seldom fails to relieve.
In other cities too, people are praising Ferguson for his tonic.
Ferguson is sold by all first-class drug stores everywhere. It is a specialty introduced at Chas. M.

SHORT SHAVINGS

"Why don't you take your car out these days?"
 "Flat tire."
 "Why don't you get it repaired?"
 "Flat tankroll."
 "Why don't you like to play with the little boy next door? He plays fair, doesn't he?"
 "Oh, yes."
 "And he doesn't hit when you're down, does he?"
 "No; but he might as well. He hits me every time I get up."
 "I saw the cutest little hat this afternoon."
 "Did you buy it?"
 "Not yet. I've got to pick out a more expensive one for my husband to refuse to buy so I can compromise on this one."
 "Have you been able to figure it out how it is that you have plenty of heat in your house?"
 "Sure; the owner lives in one of the apartments."
 "I understand Mrs. Prager lost several boarders the other day."
 "Yes."
 "What was the trouble?"
 "Well, they said the table repair was good as a whole, and the star boarder was a luxurious case, but they preferred more food and less vaudeville."

"Yes, indeed," argues the Ford salesman, "this little car is a great investment. You put a few dollars into a Ford and right away it runs into thousands."

Newest Art Needlework Creations

This week is art needlework week at Feldman's. Weeks of planning have brought together the most beautiful and complete assortment of art goods to embroider that can be found in this section of the state. Most of the largest department stores can not boast of such a wide and extensive assembly. Only yesterday did we hear a woman, who by the way lives in a city six times the size of Lima, remark that she could hardly believe it possible that Feldman's should carry a broader selection than in the stores of her home city.
